Proposed Administrative Development — Corporate tax returns

CCRA web page, 1999-2000: Corporate Income Tax Redesign

Revenue Canada's aim is to make the administration of taxes more efficient for businesses, tax professionals and governments. We recognize that reducing the compliance burden of all levels of government on Canadian businesses is a critical factor in making Canada more competitive. The Corporate Income Tax Redesign is a major step towards the client-oriented, electronic commerce based tax system we plan to put in place over the next five years.

The redesign will result in changes to the way you file your T2 returns and financial statements, and it will offer new filing options. Our Corporation Income Tax Processing Redesign newsletter provides details about the changes.

Your corporation's processing tax centre may have changed

If your corporation is located in the areas served by the Charlottetown, Belleville, Hamilton or Kitchener-Waterloo Tax Services Offices, please file T2 Corporation Income Tax returns prepared after April 3, 2000 to: Tax Centre Summerside, PEI C1N 6A2

Faster and More Accurate

Revenue Canada is developing a faster and more accurate processing system for corporation income tax returns. Instead of manually checking information, we will verify the information electronically in the new system. We will also offer corporations the option of filing income tax returns using electronic data interchange (EDI). Our redesigned system will give Canadian corporations a secure, fast and paperless way to file returns.

We have developed a General Index of Financial Information (GIFI) that will collect balance sheet, income statements, and retained earnings information from corporations in a codified format while allowing corporations to be flexible in how they structure and present this information.

We will be continually posting updates concerning our redesign on this site to keep you informed. For more information about this initiative, see: http://www.ccra-adrc.gc.ca/tax/business/t2return/index-e.html

Proposed Amendment — Internet Filing

Revenue Canada news release, June 15, 1999: Internet filing pilot project for tax returns in 2000

The Honourable Herb Dhaliwal, Minister of National Revenue and M.P. (Vancouver South-Burnaby), today announced that next year a pilot project will allow approximately 3.5 million Canadians to file their 1999 tax returns via the Internet.

"I am pleased to tell Canadians that next year a national pilot project will be implemented to allow selected individuals to file their next tax return using the Internet. I know Canadians have been asking for this option in recent years. Revenue Canada is now in a position to offer Internet filing because security concerns have been addressed," Mr. Dhaliwal said.

Next year, those eligible for participation will receive an invitation and a unique identifier that will allow them to use this new filing option. The pilot Internet filing project will be open to those who used commercial software to prepare their own 1998 tax return and then filed a computer-generated paper return. The use of commercially available tax preparation software approved by Revenue Canada will be mandatory.

"We want to make filing as convenient as possible for Canadians," said the Minister. "In the last few years we have implemented a variety of methods giving Canadians the most modern options for filing their tax returns."

Internet filing is the third and newest electronic filing option offered to individuals by Revenue Canada. The first, EFILE is an automated system that allows individuals to file their tax return using the services of a third party, called an electronic filer. The electronic filer prepares tax returns using special tax software, and then transmits the income tax information, through secure communication lines, to Revenue Canada.

The second option introduced was TELEFILE, an automated system that allows Revenue Canada to accept income tax returns over the telephone.

"In the last year, we have seen another significant increase of the use of these electronic filing options by Canadians," Mr. Dhaliwal said.

The Minister noted the positive response that Canadians have shown to electronic options that improve efficiency and respond to client demands.

- The number of EFILE tax returns received increased by more than 284,000 over 1998 to 5.3 million — an increase of more than 5.6%.
- The number of TELEFILE tax returns received increased by more than 169,000 over 1998 to 548,521 — an increase of more than 44.7%.
- On average, it took the Department slightly less than 2 weeks to process an electronic return.
- Revenue Canada continues to process returns filed on paper within a 4 to 6 week period.

Proposed Addition — 152(6.1)

(6.1) Reassessment where amount included in income under subsec. 91(1) is reduced — Where

(a) a taxpayer has filed for a particular taxation year the return of income required by section 150,

(b) the amount included in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year under subsection 91(1) is subsequently reduced because of a reduction in the foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer for a taxation year of the affiliate that ends in the particular year and is

(i) attributable to the amount prescribed to be the deductible loss of the affiliate for the year that arose in a subsequent year of the affiliate that ends in a subsequent taxation year of the taxpayer, and

(ii) included in the description of F of the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) in respect of the affiliate for the year, and

(c) the taxpayer has filed with the Minister, on or before the filing-due-date for the taxpayer's subsequent taxation year, a prescribed form amending the return, the Minister shall reassess the taxpayer's tax for any relevant taxation year (other than a taxation year preceding the particular taxation year) in order to take into account the reduction in the amount included under subsection 91(1) in computing the income of the taxpayer for the year.

Related Provisions: Reg. 5903(1) — Loss carryback.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 91(3), will add subsec. 152(6.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates that begin after November 30, 1999.

Technical Notes: New subsection 152(6.1) of the Act is consequential to the extension of the deductible loss carryover period for foreign accrual property losses in the description of F in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) and section 5903 of the Regulations. Subsection 152(6.1) provides for the reassessment of all relevant taxation years (other than taxation years preceding the particular taxation year) where the taxpayer has filed a prescribed form carrying back a deductible loss from a subsequent taxation year that reduces the taxpayer's income for the particular year under subsection 91(1).

(7) Assessment not dependent on return or information — The Minister is not bound by a return or information supplied by or on behalf of a taxpayer and, in making an assessment, may, notwithstanding a return or information so supplied or if no return has been filed, assess the tax payable under this Part.

Related Provisions: 152(4) — Reassessment; 160.2(3) — Minister may assess recipient under RRSP or RRIF; 165 — Objections to assessments; 169 — Appeal to Tax Court of Canada.

The Queen*, [1976] C.T.C. 221 (FCA) (Burden of proof is on taxpayer to justify new trial relating to net worth assessment; evidence insufficient).

(8) Assessment deemed valid and binding — An assessment shall, subject to being varied or vacated on an objection or appeal under this Part and subject to a reassessment, be deemed to be valid and binding notwithstanding any error, defect or omission in the assessment or in any proceeding under this Act relating thereto.

Related Provisions: 152(3) — Liability for tax not affected by incorrect or incomplete assessment; 152(4) — Reassessment; 158 — Assessed amount payable forthwith; 160(2) — Minister may assess transferee; 160.2(3) — Minister may assess recipient; 165 — Objections to assessments; 166 — Assessment not to be vacated by reason of improper procedures; 172 — Appeal; 225.1 — Collection restrictions while assessment under objection or appeal.

(9) Alternative basis for assessment — The Minister may advance an alternative argument in support of an assessment at any time after the normal reassessment period unless, on an appeal under this Act

(a) there is relevant evidence that the taxpayer is no longer able to adduce without the leave of the court; and

(b) it is not appropriate in the circumstances for the court to order that the evidence be adduced.

Related Provisions: 152(5) — Limitation on income inclusion after normal reassessment period.

Proposed Addition — 152(10)

(10) Where tax deemed not to be assessed — Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an amount of tax for which adequate security is accepted by the Minister under subsection 220(4.5) or (4.6) is, until the end of the period during which the security is accepted by the Minister, deemed for the purpose of any agreement entered into by or on behalf of the Government of Canada under section 7 of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act not to have been assessed under this Act.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 91(4), will add subsec. 152(10), applicable to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: New subsection 152(10) of the Act provides that an amount of tax for which adequate security is accepted by the Minister of National Revenue under subsection 220(4.5) or (4.6) of the Act shall not be treated as an amount assessed under the Act, for the period during which such security is accepted, for the purpose of any agreement entered into by the federal government under section 7 of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act.

New subsection 152(10) applies to taxation years that end after October 1, 1996.

I.T. Technical News: No. 4 (section 160 — the Davis case).

(1.1) Joint liability where subsec. 69(11) applies — Where a particular person or partnership is deemed by subsection 69(11) to have disposed of a property at any time, the person referred to in that subsection to whom a benefit described in that subsection was available in respect of a subsequent disposition of the property or property substituted for the property is jointly and severally liable with each other taxpayer to pay a part of the other taxpayer's liabilities under this Act in respect of each taxation year equal to the amount determined by the formula

A is the total of amounts payable under this Act by the other taxpayer in respect of the year, and

B is the amount that would, if the particular person or partnership were not deemed by subsection 69(11) to have disposed of the property, be determined for A in respect of the other taxpayer in respect of the year, but nothing under this subsection is deemed to limit the liability of the other taxpayer under any other provision of this Act.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(a) carried on a business that purchased goods or services from a business the income of which is directly or indirectly included in computing the individual's split income for the year;

(e) was a shareholder of a professional corporation, dividends on the shares of the capital stock of which were directly or indirectly included in computing the individual's split income for the year.

(2) Assessment — The Minister may at any time assess a taxpayer in respect of any amount payable because of this section and the provisions of this Division apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152.

Related Provisions: 152 — Assessment.

History: Subsec. 160(2) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 186(2), in force on June 18, 1998. Subsec. 160(2) formerly read:

(2) Minister may assess transferee — The Minister may at any time assess a transferee in respect of any amount payable by virtue of this section and the provisions of this Division are applicable, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of an assessment made under this section as though it had been made under section 152.

Selected Cases [subsec. 160(2)]: Phillips (E.) v. Canada, [1993] 2 C.T.C. 2110 (TCC) (Assessment under provision cannot include amounts in respect of transferor's provincial tax liability).

(3) Discharge of liability — Where a particular taxpayer has become jointly and severally liable with another taxpayer under this section in respect of part or all of a liability under this Act of the other taxpayer,

(a) a payment by the particular taxpayer on account of that taxpayer's liability shall to the extent of the payment discharge the joint liability; but

(b) a payment by the other taxpayer on account of that taxpayer's liability discharges the particular taxpayer's liability only to the extent that the payment operates to reduce that other taxpayer's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the particular taxpayer is, by this section, made jointly and severally liable.

History: Subsec. 160(3) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 186(2), in force on June 18, 1998. Subsec. 160(3) formerly read:

(3) Rules applicable — Where a transferor and transferee have, by virtue of subsection (1), become jointly and severally liable in respect of part or all of a liability of the transferor under this Act, the following rules apply:

(a) a payment by the transferee on account of the transferee's liability shall to the extent thereof discharge the joint liability; but

(b) a payment by the transferor on account of the transferor's liability only discharges the transferee's liability to the extent that the payment operates to reduce the transferor's liability to an amount less than the amount in respect of which the transferee was, by subsection (1), made jointly and severally liable.

Proposed Addition — 160(3.1)

(3.1) Fair market value of undivided interest — For the purposes of this section and section 160.4, the fair market value at any time of an undivided interest in a property, expressed as a proportionate interest in that property, is, subject to subsection (4), deemed to be equal to the same proportion of the fair market value of that property at that time.

Application: Bill C-24 (Second Reading in the Senate June 28, 2000) (GST technical bill), s. 170, will add subsec. 160(3.1), applicable to transfers of property made after June 4, 1999.

Technical Notes: Section 160 of the Income Tax Act provides rules under which a transferee of property may be liable for unpaid taxes of the transferor when the two parties are not dealing at arm's length. In general, this liability is limited to the amount by which the fair market value of the property (at the time it is transferred) exceeds the consideration, if any, given for the property. New subsection 160(3.1) provides a rule for determining the fair market value of a proportionate undivided interest in property for the purposes of applying section 160.

Under new subsection 160(3.1), the fair market value of each proportionate undivided interest in a property is deemed to be equal to that same proportion of the fair market value of the whole of the property. For example, if a husband and wife each have a 50% undivided interest in real property, the fair market value of each of their interests is deemed to be equal to 50% of the fair market value of the real property. This rule is subject to the special rule in subsection 160(4) that deems the value of the interest to be nil when it is transferred pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a tribunal on a marriage breakdown.

Clause 98 adds a parallel provision to the Excise Tax Act as new subsection 325(1.1).

This amendment applies to transfers of property made after June 4, 1999.

(4) Special rules re transfer of property to spouse — Notwithstanding subsection (1), where at any time a taxpayer has transferred property to the taxpayer's spouse pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal or pursuant to a written separation agreement and, at that time, the taxpayer and the spouse were separated and living apart as a result of the breakdown of their marriage, the following rules apply:

Proposed Amendment — Common-law partners

Application: 2000, c. 12 (Bill C-23), Sch. 2, s. 9, will replace "marriage" with "marriage or common-law partnership", applicable to 2001 et seq., to come into force on a day to be fixed by order of the Governor of Council. See also the transitional rules reproduced under 248(1)"common-law partner".

(a) in respect of property so transferred after February 15, 1984,

(i) the spouse shall not be liable under subsection (1) to pay any amount with respect to any income from, or gain from the disposition of, the property so transferred or property substituted therefor, and

(ii) for the purposes of paragraph (1)(e), the fair market value of the property at the time it was transferred shall be deemed to be nil, and

Proposed Amendment — Extension of s. 161.1 to individuals

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 28, 2000: Offsetting of Interest on Personal Tax Overpayments and Underpayments

(23) That, for individuals other than trusts, the taxable amount of refund interest accruing over any period after 1999 on overpayments of income tax be reduced by the amount of any arrears interest accruing over the same period on unpaid income tax.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 28, 2000: Offsetting of Interest on Personal Tax Overpayments and Underpayments

An individual who has made an overpayment of income tax may be entitled to receive refund interest from the government on the overpayment. Refund interest is included in income for tax purposes, in the same manner as interest from other sources.

If, on the other hand, an individual has failed to pay an amount of income tax when due, the individual is required to pay arrears interest to the government. Arrears interest is not deductible in computing a taxpayer's income for tax purposes.

The taxation of refund interest and non-deductibility of arrears interest can produce inappropriate results in situations where an individual who owes interest on unpaid tax from one taxation year is concurrently owed interest on a tax overpayment from a different taxation year. In this circumstance, the cost of the non-deductible interest payable by the individual exceeds the after-tax value of the taxable interest receivable by the individual. In many instances, this difference results from the non-deductibility of interest paid and the inclusion in income of interest received.

This budget proposes a relieving mechanism for these individuals. Refund interest accruing over a period will be taxable only to the extent that it exceeds any arrears interest that accrued over the same period to which the refund interest relates. As under current practice, the individual's notice of assessment will indicate the full amount of refund interest. In addition, the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency will issue an information slip indicating the amount, if any, of the refund interest that must be included in the individual's income for tax purposes.

This measure will apply to individuals other than trusts in respect of arrears and refund interest amounts that accrue concurrently after 1999, regardless of the taxation year to which the amounts relate.

Proposed Amendment — 162(10.1)A(d)

(d) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.2 in respect of a trust, 5% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time it was made, of a contribution of the person or partnership made to the trust before the end of the last taxation year of the trust in respect of which the return is required,

Application: The June 22, 2000 draft legislation, subsec. 20(1), will amend para. (d) of the description of A in subsec 162(10.1) to read as above, applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: Subsection 162 and 163 of the Act impose penalties for infractions such as failing to provide certain information on a return, failing to file a return for a taxation year, and making false statements on a return.

Subsection 162(10.1) of the Act imposes a penalty on any person or partnership that is more than 24 months late in filing an information return that the person or partnership was required to file under any of sections 233.1 to 233.4. (This penalty applies in addition to the penalties imposed under subsections 162(7) and (10)).

The penalty imposed under subsection 162(10.1) with respect to a particular information return is equal to a specified amount less the amount of the penalties imposed under subsections 162(7) and (10) with respect to the return. The specified amount with respect to an information return for a trust required to be filed by a person or partnership under section 233.2 is equal to 5% of the total fair market value of any property transferred or loaned to the trust that, if no other loan or transfer were taken into account, would have imposed an obligation on the person or partnership to file the return.

Subsection 162(10.1) is amended as a consequence of amendments made to section 233.2, by changing the manner in which the specified amount is determined. The specified amount is now to be determined with reference to the fair market value of "contributions" made by the person or partnership to the trust.

(e) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.3 for a taxation year or fiscal period, 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a specified foreign property (as defined by subsection 233.3(1)) of the person or partnership, and

(f) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.4 for a taxation year or fiscal period in respect of a foreign affiliate of the person or partnership, 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a property of the person or partnership that is a share of the capital stock or indebtedness of the affiliate, and

B is the total of the penalties to which the person or partnership is liable under subsections (7) and (10) in respect of the return.

Related Provisions: 162(7) — Initial calculation of penalty; 162(10.11) — Application to trust contributions; 162(10.2) — Shares or debt owned by controlled foreign affiliate; 162(10.3) — Application to partnerships; 162(10.4) — Application to non-resident trusts; 163(2.4)–(2.91) — Penalty for false statement or omission in return; 233.5 — Due diligence defence to penalty; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 162(10.1) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 51(3), applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

Proposed Addition — 162(10.11)

(10.11) Application to trust contributions — Subsections 94(1) and (2) apply for the purpose of paragraph (d) of the description of A in subsection (10.1), except that for this purpose the definition "arm's length transfer" in subsection 94(1) shall be read without reference to subparagraph (a)(v) of that definition.

Application: The June 22, 2000 draft legislation, subsec. 20(2), will add subsec. 162(10.11), applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: New subsection 162(10.11) provides that, for the purpose of the calculation in subsection 162(10.1), the definitions and rules in subsections 94(1) and (2) generally apply. Subsection 162(10.11) is similar to amended subsection 233.2(2), described in greater detail in the commentary below.

This amendment applies to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

(10.2) Shares or debt owned by controlled foreign affiliate — For the purpose of paragraph (f) of the description of A in subsection (10.1),

(a) shares or indebtedness owned by a controlled foreign affiliate of a person or partnership are deemed to be owned by the person or partnership; and

(b) the cost amount at any time of such shares or indebtedness to the person or partnership is deemed to be equal to 20% of the cost amount at that time to the controlled foreign affiliate of the shares or indebtedness.

Related Provisions: 162(10.3) — Application to partnerships; 162(10.4) — Application to non-resident trusts.

History: Subsec. 162(10.2) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 51(3), applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

(10.3) Application to partnerships — For the purposes of paragraph (f) of the description of A in subsection (10.1) and subsection (10.2), in determining whether a non-resident corporation or trust is a foreign affiliate or a controlled foreign affiliate of a partnership,

Proposed Amendment — 162(10.3)

(10.3) Application to partnerships — For the purposes of paragraph (f) of the description of A in subsection (10.1) and subsection (10.2), in determining whether a non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate or a controlled foreign affiliate of a partnership,

Application: The June 22, 2000 draft legislation, subsec. 20(3), will amend the opening words of subsec. 162(10.3) to read as above, applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: Existing paragraph 94(1)(d) of the Act provides for non-resident trusts to be treated as foreign affiliates, but is being repealed as a consequence of the introduction of new rules for non-resident trusts in section 94. Subsections 162(10.3) and (10.4) are rules affecting the calculation of penalty tax in respect of a person's or partnership's failure to file a return in respect of a foreign affiliate.

Subsections 163(2.6) and (2.91) are similar provisions that affect the calculation of penalty tax in respect of false statements and omissions in such a return.

Subsections 162(10.3) and 163(2.6) are amended to reflect the changes to section 94 under which non-resident trusts are no longer treated as foreign affiliates. Subsections 162(10.4) and 163(2.91) are repealed for the same reason.

These amendments apply to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

(a) the definitions "direct equity percentage" and "equity percentage" in subsection 95(4) shall be read as if a partnership were a person; and

(b) the definitions "controlled foreign affiliate" and "foreign affiliate" in subsection 95(1) shall be read as if a partnership were a taxpayer resident in Canada.

History: Subsec. 162(10.3) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 51(3), applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

(10.4) Application to non-resident trusts — For the purposes of this subsection, paragraph (f) of the description of A in subsection (10.1) and subsection (10.2),

(a) a non-resident trust is deemed to be a controlled foreign affiliate of each beneficiary of which the trust is a controlled foreign affiliate for the purpose of section 233.4;

(b) the trust is deemed to be a non-resident corporation having a capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares;

(c) each beneficiary under the trust is deemed to own at any time the number of the issued shares of the corporation that is equal to the proportion of 100 that

(i) the fair market value at that time of the beneficiary's beneficial interest in the trust

is of

(ii) the fair market value at that time of all beneficial interests in the trust; and

(d) the cost amount to a beneficiary at any time of a share of the corporation is deemed to be equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the fair market value at that time of the beneficiary's beneficial interest in the trust, and

B is the number of shares deemed under paragraph (c) to be owned at that time by the beneficiary in respect of the corporation.

Proposed Amendment — 163(2.4)(b)

(b) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.2 in respect of a trust, the greater of

(i) $24,000, and

(ii) 5% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time it was made, of a contribution of the person or partnership made to the trust before the end of the last taxation year of the trust in respect of which the return is required;

Application: The June 22, 2000 draft legislation, subsec. 21(1), will amend para. 163(2.4)(b) to read as above, applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: Subsection 163(2.4) of the Act imposes a penalty on any person or partnership that, knowingly or under circumstances amounting to gross negligence, has made or has participated in, assented to, or acquiesced in, the making of a false statement or omission in a return required to be filed under any of sections 233.1 to 233.6. The penalty under paragraph 163(2.4)(b) relates to a return required to be filed under section 233.2. The existing penalty is the greater of $24,000 and 5% of the total fair market value of the property that the person or partnership loaned or transferred to the trust that gave rise to the obligation to file.

Paragraph 163(2.4)(b) is amended as a consequence of changes made to the non-resident trust rules in section 94 and the annual reporting requirement in respect of non-resident trusts under section 233.2. Under amended section 233.2, a person is subject to the annual reporting requirement where a "contribution" is made to the trust by the person.

Accordingly, amended paragraph 163(2.4)(b) provides for a penalty for a person equal the greater of $24,000 and 5% of a specified amount in respect of the return. The specified amount for a person is essentially equal to 5% of the fair market value of "contributions" made by the person. The specified amount is calculated in the same way as the specified amount under amended subsection 162(10.1) in respect of late-filed returns. Under new subsection 163(2.41), the definitions and rules in subsections 94(1) and (2) generally apply. Subsection 163(2.41) is similar to amended subsection 233.2(2), described in greater detail in the commentary below.

This amendment applies to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

(c) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.3 for a taxation year or fiscal period, the greater of

(i) $24,000, and

(ii) 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a specified foreign property (as defined by subsection 233.3(1)(a)) of the person or partnership in respect of which the false statement or omission is made;

(d) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.4 for a taxation year or fiscal period, the greater of

(i) $24,000, and

(ii) 5% of the greatest of all amounts each of which is the total of the cost amounts to the person or partnership at any time in the year or period of a property of the person or partnership that is a share of the capital stock or indebtedness of the foreign affiliate in respect of which the return is being filed; and

(e) where the return is required to be filed under section 233.6 for a taxation year or fiscal period, the greater of

(i) $2,500, and

(ii) 5% of the total of

(A) all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property that is distributed to the person or partnership in the year or period by the trust and in respect of which the false statement or omission is made, and

(B) all amounts each of which is the greatest unpaid principal amount of a debt that is owing to the trust by the person or partnership in the year or period and in respect of which the false statement or omission is made.

Proposed Addition — 163(2.41)

(2.41) Application to trust contributions — Subsections 94(1) and (2) apply for the purpose of subparagraph (b)(ii), except that for this purpose the definition "arm's length transfer" in subsection 94(1) shall be read without reference to subparagraph (a)(v) of that definition.

Application: The June 22, 2000 draft legislation, subsec. 21(2), will add subsec. 163(2.41), applicable to returns in respect of taxation years that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: See under 163(2.4)(b).

(2.5) Shares or debt owned by controlled foreign affiliate — For the purpose of paragraph (2.4)(d),

(a) shares or indebtedness owned by a controlled foreign affiliate of a person or partnership are deemed to be owned by the person or partnership; and

(b) the cost amount at any time of such shares or indebtedness to the person or partnership is deemed to be equal to 20% of the cost amount at that time to the controlled foreign affiliate of the shares or indebtedness.

Technical Notes: See under 162(10.3).

(a) the definitions "direct equity percentage" and "equity percentage" in subsection 95(4) shall be read as if a partnership were a person; and

(b) the definitions "controlled foreign affiliate" and "foreign affiliate" in subsection 95(1) shall be read as if a partnership were a taxpayer resident in Canada.

History: Subsec. 163(2.6) added by 1997, c. 25 subsec. 52(3), applicable to returns required to be filed on or before a day that is after April 29, 1998.

and 164 to 167 and Division J apply, with any changes that the circumstances require, in respect of the penalty as if the partnership were a corporation.

History: Subsec. 163(2.9) amended by 2000, c. 19, subsec. 49(3), in force June 29, 2000 (Royal Assent). The subsec. formerly read:

> (2.9) Where a partnership is liable to a penalty under subsection (2.4), sections 152, 158 to 160.1, 161 and 164 to 167 and Division J apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, to the penalty as if the partnership were a corporation.

PART I.1 — INDIVIDUAL SURTAX

180.1 (1) Individual surtax — Every individual shall pay a tax under this Part for each taxation year equal to 5% of the amount, if any, by which the tax payable under Part I by the individual for the year exceeds $12,500.

Proposed Amendment — Elimination of 5% surtax

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 28, 2000: Individual Surtax

(5) That the 5 per cent surtax required to be paid by an individual

(a) be based on the individual's tax otherwise payable under Part I of the Act in excess of $15,500, for the 2000 taxation year, and

(b) be reduced to 4 per cent of the individual's tax otherwise payable under Part I of the Act in excess of $18,500, for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 28, 2000: 5% Surtax

Under the current rules, a 5% surtax applies to basic federal tax in excess of $12,500 (at an income level of about $65,000). The budget proposes to raise this amount to $18,500 (at an income level of about $85,000) effective July 1, 2000. Raising the surtax threshold to $18,500 of basic federal tax as of July 1, 2000, means that, for the 2000 taxation year, the 5% surtax would apply on basic federal tax in excess of $15,500.

The budget also proposes to reduce the surtax rate from 5% to 4% effective January 1, 2001.

The 5% surtax will be eliminated within the next five years.

Proposed Addition — 180.1(1.4)

(1.4) Former resident — credit for tax paid — There may be deducted from the tax otherwise payable under this Part by an individual for a taxation year (computed without reference to subsections (1.1) and (1.2)) the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount that would be deductible under section 119 in computing the individual's tax payable under Part I for the year if, in applying for that purpose paragraph (a) of the definition "tax for the year otherwise payable under this Part" in subsection 126(7), the reference in that paragraph to "tax payable under this Part for the year" were read as a reference to "the total of taxes that, but for subsections 180.1(1.1), (1.2) and (1.4), would be payable under this Part and Part I.1 for the year"

exceeds

(b) the amount deductible under section 119 in computing the individual's tax payable under Part I for the year.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 95(1), will add subsec. 180.1(1.4), applicable after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Section 180.1 of the Act imposes a surtax on individuals at a rate of 3% of the tax payable under Part I of the Act. An additional 5% surtax is imposed on that portion of an individual's Part I tax in excess of $12,500.

New subsection 40(3.7) of the Act provides a "stop-loss" rule that may apply to reduce the loss of an individual from the disposition of property at a particular time, where the individual was non-resident at any time before the particular time and received dividends in respect of the property while non-resident. New section 119 of the Act provides a special tax credit in certain cases where subsection 40(3.7) applies to an individual who ceased to be resident in Canada. If an individual's Part I tax for the year that includes the emigration is less than the amount deductible under section 119, new subsection 180.1(1.4) of the Act provides that the individual may deduct the balance from the tax otherwise payable under Part I.1 of the Act for that year.

(2) Meaning of tax payable under Part I — For the purposes of subsection (1), the tax payable under Part I by an individual for a taxation year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) where section 119 is applicable in computing the individual's tax payable for the year, the amount that would be the individual's average tax for the year of averaging, as determined under paragraph 119(1)(d), if the expression "deductible under subsection 127(5)" in that paragraph were read as "added under subsection 120(1) or deductible under sections 122.3, 126, 127 and 127.2 to 127.4", and

(b) in any other case, the amount that would be the individual's tax payable under that Part for the year if that Part were read without reference to subsection 120(1) and sections 122.3, 126, 127, 127.2 to 127.4 and 127.54

(c) where the individual was throughout the year a mutual fund trust, the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of the description of A in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in subsection 132(4) in respect of the trust for the year, and

(d) in any other case, nil.

Proposed Amendment — 180.1(2)

(2) Meaning of tax payable under Part I — For the purposes of subsection (1), the tax payable under Part I by an individual for a taxation year is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount that would be the individual's tax payable under that Part for the year if that Part were read without reference to section 119, subsection 120(1) and sections 122.3, 126, 127, 127.4 and 127.54

exceeds

(b) if the individual was throughout the year a mutual fund trust, the least of the amounts determined under paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of the description of A in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in subsection 132(4) in respect of the trust for the year, and

(c) in any other case, nil.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 95(2), will amend subsec. 180.1(2) to read as above, applicable after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Subsection 180.1(2) of the Act provides rules for calculating Part I tax for the purposes of determining the base for tax under Part I.1 of the Act ("surtax"). Essentially, the tax base for surtax is the individual's tax payable for the year under Part I of the Act, calculated without reference to certain amounts. Paragraphs 180.1(2)(a) and (b) are amended to add to the list of those amounts an amount deductible under new section 119 of the Act in respect of a former resident of Canada.

Related Provisions: 128.3 — Shares acquired on rollover deemed to be same shares for 180.2(1.4).

(3) Return — Every individual liable to pay tax under this Part for a taxation year shall, on or before the day on or before which the individual is required by section 150 to file a return of income for the year under Part I, or would be so required if the individual were liable to pay tax under Part I for the year,

(a) where the individual has filed a return of income for the base taxation year in relation to the month in which the particular amount is paid, the lesser of

(i) the amount by which the particular amount exceeds the amount of tax payable under Part XIII by the individual on the particular amount, and

(ii) the amount determined by the formula

$$(0.0125A - $625)(1 - B)$$

Proposed Amendment — 180.2(4)(a)(ii)

$$(0.0125A - $665)(1-B)$$

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 96, will amend the formula in subpara. 180.2(4)(a)(ii) to read as above, applicable to amounts paid after November 1999.

Technical Notes: Section 180.2 of the Act provides for the recovery of Old Age Security (OAS) benefits paid to an individual to the extent that the individual's income for a year exceeds a partially indexed $50,000 threshold ($53,215 for 1999). In 1996, the structure of the recovery of OAS benefits was modified by providing for tax to be withheld on the benefits. Given that the amount of the benefits recovered is computed, in part, by reference to 15% of the individual's income in excess of $50,000 (or effectively 1.25% of the excess on a monthly basis), the formula in subsection 180.2(4) includes an amount of $625, which is equal to 1.25% of $50,000. However, because the recovery of OAS benefits through withholding was introduced in 1996, at the time where the partially indexed threshold was equal to $53,215, the amount used in the formula should have then been set at $665, i.e., 1.25% of $53,215. This amendment corrects this oversight.

Possible Future Amendment — Joint debt

Letter from Department of Finance, August 6, 1997:

Dear [xxx]

This is in response to your memorandum dated July 29, 1997 respecting the application of the Large Corporation Tax (LCT) to joint debt. You are concerned that joint debt may be fully taxed in the hands of each co-borrower under the LCT, even though the advance is divided among those borrowers. Using the example provided in your note, a joint debt in the amount of $400 million might be shared so that one party is advanced $100 million and the other, $300 million. You believe that the aggregate addition to capital in respect of the debt should be $400 million for the two borrowers; your concern is that, under the current law, each of them would be required to add $400 million to capital with the result that a total of $800 million would be subject to LCT.

Your concern is based on the current wording of subsection 181(3) of the Act, which provides that, "except as otherwise provided under this Part", the amounts to be used in calculating LCT are those set out on the taxpayer's balance sheet, prepared in accordance with GAAP. You feel that the definition of capital in paragraph 181.2(3) of the Act "provides otherwise" for these purposes, and hence, that the amounts set out on the balance sheet may not be relevant.

As you have described it, GAAP currently provides that only the portion of a jointly-incurred debt that is actually advanced to a borrower is recorded as a liability on the balance sheet. A note to the balance sheet indicates the full value of the joint debt in order to disclose the legal liability of the borrower for that part of the debt that was not received by that borrower. If subsection 181(3) applies, you reason that the taxpayers in your example would be taxed on $100 million and $300 million in capital respectively. If subsection 181(3) does not apply, each taxpayer would be taxed on the full amount of their legal indebtedness, being $400 million.

In our view, the definition of capital in subsection 181.2(3) of the Act does not constitute an exception to the application of subsection 181(3) of the Act. Rather, our intention — which we believe to be reflected in the existing legislation — is that subsection 181(3) apply to use the amounts reflected in a borrower's balance sheet to quantify the amounts included in its capital.

That being said, there may be a risk of double-counting in the application of the LCT to jointly-incurred debt. As notes to the financial statements are an integral part of the balance sheet, there is a possibility that the amount set out in the notes would be assessed as the corporation's capital in respect of a joint debt. If this were to occur, each co-borrower under a joint debt would be taxed for the full amount of the debt, irrespective of the amount actually advanced to that borrower.

In principle, we agree that the amount of a joint debt should only be taxed once, and we hope to discuss this matter further with Revenue Canada officials to determine whether that result can be achieved under the current law. If that proves unsuccessful, we are prepared to consider legislative changes to ensure this outcome. As noted, GAAP currently allocates joint debt based on the amount of cash advanced to each co-borrower — for LCT purposes, other factors may be relevant in making such an allocation. If a change to the law should prove necessary, we would be pleased [to] have your views in this respect.

If you would like to discuss this matter in more detail, please feel free to contact Robin Maley (992-4859) or Brian Ernewein (992-3045) of the Division directly.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

Proposed Amendment — Capital of authorized foreign bank

Notice of Ways and Means Motion (authorized foreign banks), February 11, 1999: (5) That, for the purposes of Part I.3 and Part VI of the Act, the capital of an authorized foreign bank be an amount equal to 10% of the bank's risk-weighted assets as determined under prescribed rules based on the risk-weighted asset guidelines of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions.

Department of Finance news release, February 11, 1999: Capital Tax

Banks are subject to capital tax under Part I.3 and Part VI of the Income Tax Act. While the definitions of "capital" for regulatory and tax purposes differ slightly, the components of a Canadian bank's regulatory capital are generally subject to capital tax. Thus, the regulatory capital requirements applicable to Canadian banks guarantee that those entities have a minimum amount of taxable capital employed in Canada.

Because foreign banks having branches in Canada will be subject to the capital adequacy requirements imposed by the banks' home countries, the branches themselves will not be required to comply with Canadian capital requirements applicable to Canadian banks. Given that Canadian capital taxes are based to a large extent on the capital requirements imposed by Canadian regulators, a foreign branch could pay substantially less capital tax than its domestic competitors.

A new capital tax base is proposed to apply to foreign banks. For tax purposes, the capital of a foreign bank that has a Canadian branch will equal 10% of the "risk-weighted assets" of the Canadian branch, which will be defined, for these purposes, with regard to the risk-weighted asset requirements currently used by the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions.

[For other proposals see under 248(1)"authorized foreign bank" — ed.]

PART II — TOBACCO MANUFACTURERS' SURTAX

182. (1) Surtax — Every corporation shall pay a tax under this Part for each taxation year equal to 40% of that proportion of the corporation's Part I tax on tobacco manufacturing profits for the year that

(a) the number of days in the year that are after February 8, 1994 and before February 9, 2000

is of

(b) the number of days in the year.

Proposed Amendment — 182(1)

182. (1) Surtax — Every corporation shall pay a tax under this Part for each taxation year equal to 40% of the corporation's Part I tax on tobacco manufacturing profits for the year.

Application: Bill C-24 (Second Reading in the Senate June 28, 2000) (GST technical bill), s. 173, will amend subsec. 182(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 8, 2000.

Technical Notes: Part II of the Income Tax Act imposes a surtax on a corporation's tax under Part I of that Act on profits from tobacco manufacturing. The surtax was initially enacted for a 3-year period beginning February 9, 1994, and was subsequently extended to February 8, 2000. The amendment to subsection 182(1) removes the termination date in the provision, thereby making the surtax permanent. The reference to the initial date of application of the surtax is also removed, since it is not relevant to the current or future taxation years.

Department of Finance news release, November 5, 1999: Tobacco Tax Increases Announced

Minister of National Revenue Martin Cauchon, on behalf of Finance Minister Paul Martin, today tabled in the House of Commons a Notice of Ways and Means Motion to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Income Tax Act to increase excise taxes on cigarettes and tobacco sticks and to make permanent the current 40 per cent surtax on the profits of tobacco manufacturers.

The motion also proposes that, effective February 9, 2000, the current 40% surtax on the profits of tobacco manufacturers imposed under the Income Tax Act be made permanent. The tobacco manufacturers' surtax was initially introduced on February 9, 1994 on a three-year temporary basis. It was extended for three years from February 1997 and is scheduled to expire on February 8, 2000. The tax raises about $70 million annually.

"The measures introduced today reaffirm the Government's determination to reduce tobacco consumption in Canada," Minister Martin said. Health Minister Allan Rock added, "Tax increases are one part of our overall strategy to reduce smoking rates, particularly among younger Canadians. We must also intensify our efforts to reduce this leading cause of preventable death through means such as tough anti-tobacco advertising, upcoming labelling and information reporting regulations, and other measures."

(a) the number of days in the year that are after February 8, 1994 and before February 9, 1997

(2) Definitions — In this Part,

"Part I tax on tobacco manufacturing profits" of a corporation for a taxation year means 21% of the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that would be the corporation's Canadian manufacturing and processing profits for the year, within the meaning assigned by subsection 125.1(3), if the total of all amounts, each of which is the corporation's loss for the year from an active business, other than tobacco manufacturing, carried on by it in Canada, were equal to the lesser of

(a) that total otherwise determined, and

(b) the total of all amounts, each of which is the amount of the corporation's income for the year from an active business, other than tobacco manufacturing, carried on by it in Canada.

B is the corporation's tobacco manufacturing capital and labour cost for the year,

C is the total of the corporation's cost of manufacturing and processing capital for the year and its cost of manufacturing and processing labour for the year, within the meanings assigned by regulations made for the purposes of section 125.1, and

D is

(a) where the corporation is a Canadian-controlled private corporation throughout the year, the corporation's business limit for the year as determined for the purpose of section 125, and

(b) in any other case, nil;

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

Regulations: 5202, 5204 (cost of manufacturing and processing capital, cost of manufacturing and processing labour).

"tobacco manufacturing" means any activity (other than farming) relating to the manufacture or processing in Canada of tobacco or tobacco products in or into any form that is, or would after any further activity become, suitable for smoking;

"tobacco manufacturing capital and labour cost" of a corporation for a taxation year means the total of the amounts that would be the corporation's cost of manufacturing and processing capital for the year and its cost of manufacturing and processing labour for the year, within the meanings assigned by regulations made for the purpose of section 125.1, if the manufacturing or processing referred to in the definition "qualified activities" in those regulations were tobacco manufacturing.

History: S. 182 added by 1994, c. 29, s. 16, applicable to taxation years ending after February 8, 1994.

Definitions [s. 182]: "active business", "amount" — 248(1); "business limit" — 125(2)–(5); "Canada" — 255; "Canadian-controlled private corporation" — 125(7), 248(1); "carried on in Canada" — 253; "corporation" — 248(1), Interpretation Act 35(1); "farming" — 248(1); "Part I tax on tobacco manufacturing profits" — 182(2); "taxation year" — 249; "tobacco manufacturing", "tobacco manufacturing capital and labour cost" — 182(2).

183. (1) Return — Every corporation that is liable to pay tax under this Part for a taxation year shall file with the Minister a return for the year in prescribed form not later than the day on or before which the corporation is required by section 150 to file its return of income for the year under Part I.

Forms: T2 SCH 46: Part II — tobacco manufacturers' surtax.

(2) Payment — Every corporation shall pay to the Receiver General on or before the later of June 30, 1994 and the last day of the second month after the end of each taxation year its tax payable under this Part for the year.

Proposed Amendment — 183(2)

(2) Payment — Every corporation shall pay to the Receiver General on or before its balance-due day for each taxation year its tax payable under this Part for the year.

Application: Bill C-24 (Second Reading in the Senate June 28, 2000) (GST technical bill), s. 174, will amend subsec. 183(2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after February 8, 2000.

Technical Notes: Subsection 183(2) of the Income Tax Act specifies the date in respect of each taxation year by which a corporation is required to pay its tax payable under Part II of that Act. This amendment replaces the requirement that the tax be paid on or before the last day of the second month after the end of a taxation year with a requirement that the tax be paid on or before the corporation's balance-due day for the year. The balance-due day is defined in subsection 248(1) of the Act in part by reference, in the case of corporations, to section 157 of the Act. In general, this day is the last day of the second month following the end of the year, except in the case of certain Canadian-controlled private corporations, for which it is the last day of the third month following the end of the year.

The amendment also removes the reference to June 30, 1994, the earliest payment due date for the surtax imposed under subsection 182(1) of the Act, since it is not relevant to the current or future taxation years.

(3) Provisions applicable — Subsections 150(2) and (3), sections 151, 152, 158 and 159, subsections 161(1) and (11), sections 162 to 167 and Division J of Part I apply to this Part with such modifications as the circumstances require.

(a) a corporation, or any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, has, at any time, paid an amount, directly or indirectly, to any person as proceeds of disposition of any property, and

(b) all or any portion of the amount may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation, the corporation shall, on or before the day on or before which it is required to file its return of income under Part I for its taxation year that includes that time, pay a tax of 45% of that amount or portion thereof, as the case may be.

(3) Stock dividend — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events, that portion of the amount shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have been paid as a substitute for dividends that would otherwise have been paid in the normal course by the corporation notwithstanding that the dividend was actually paid thereafter.

(5) Indirect payment — Where, as a part of a transaction or series of transactions or events, a person received a payment from a corporation, or from any person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length, in consideration, in whole or in part, for paying an amount to any other person as proceeds of disposition of any property, the corporation shall, for the purposes of subsection (2), be deemed to have paid the amount indirectly to the other person.

(6) Where subsec. (2) does not apply — Subsection (2) does not apply if none of the purposes of the transaction or series of transactions or events referred to therein may reasonably be considered, having regard to all the circumstances, to have been to enable shareholders of a corporation who are individuals or non-resident persons to receive an amount, directly or indirectly, as proceeds of disposition of property rather than as a dividend on a share that was of a class that was listed on a stock exchange or that was purchased and sold in the manner in which shares are normally purchased and sold by any member of the public in the open market.

(7) Where subsec. 110.6(8) does not apply — Where this section has been applied in respect of an amount, subsection 110.6(8) does not apply to the capital gain in respect of which the amount formed all or a part of the proceeds of disposition.

Pre-RSC History: S. 183.1 substituted by 1988, c. 55, s. 149, applicable with respect to transactions entered into on or after September 13, 1988, other than transactions that are part of a series of transactions, determined without reference to subsec. 248(10) commencing before September 13, 1988 and completed before 1989. S. 183.1 formerly read:

183.1 (1) Tax payable — Where, as part of a transaction or series of transactions or events, shares of the capital stock of a corporation (other than a mutual fund corporation as defined in subsection 131(8)) resident in Canada (in this section referred to as the "acquiring corporation") have, in a taxation year of the acquiring corporation, been acquired by the corporation or any other person or a partnership and

(a) subsection 84(2) or (3) was not applicable in respect of the acquisition of the shares,

(b) the consideration for the acquisition of the shares exceeded the paid-up capital of the shares immediately before the acquisition, and

(c) one of the main purposes of the transaction or series of transactions or events can reasonably be considered to have been to enable shareholders of the acquiring corporation who are individuals to realize, either directly or indirectly, a distribution of corporate surplus by the acquiring corporation as proceeds of disposition of a share, the acquiring corporation shall, on or before the day on or before which it is required to file its return of income under Part I for its taxation year in which the shares were acquired, pay a tax of 50% of the amount by which the consideration for the acquisition of the shares exceeded their paid-up capital immediately before the acquisition.

(2) Idem — For the purposes of subsection (1),

(a) where a person or partnership has acquired property that can reasonably be considered to have been substituted for a share of the capital stock of a corporation, the person or partnership shall be deemed to have acquired the share for which the property was substituted for consideration equal to the purchase price of the property; and

(b) a distribution of corporate surplus by an acquiring corporation shall be deemed to have occurred where the consideration for the acquisition of a share is provided or is to be provided, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by the acquiring corporation and that consideration exceeded the paid-up capital of the share immediately before the acquisition.

(3) Non-application of subsection (1) — Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an acquisition, at any time, of a share of the capital stock of an acquiring corporation as a part of a series of transactions or events to the extent that the subsection has been applied with respect to any acquisition, before that time, of that share as part of the series.

(4) Restrictions — For greater certainty, subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an acquisition of a share of the capital stock of an acquiring corporation where the acquisition was part of a series of transactions or events the principal purpose of which was to effect

(a) an acquisition of control of the acquiring corporation or a predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by section 87) of the acquiring corporation, as the case may be, by one or more persons or partnerships (which persons or partnerships are referred to in this paragraph as the "purchaser") unless the purchaser was not dealing at arm's length with the person or partnership that controlled or all of the persons or partnerships that were part of a group that controlled the acquiring corporation or the predecessor corporation, as the case may be, immediately before the commencement of the series;

(b) the acquisition of all of the shares of the acquiring corporation owned by a person or partnership that was dealing at arm's length with the acquiring corporation in order to increase the degree of control of the acquiring corporation or a predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by section 87) of the acquiring corporation, as the case may be, by those shareholders that controlled the acquiring corporation or the predecessor corporation, as the case may be, immediately before the commencement of the series; or

(c) the acquisition of a prescribed share of the capital stock of the acquiring corporation owned by an employee of the acquiring corporation or a corporation with which it did not deal at arm's length where the employee was dealing at arm's length with each such corporation immediately before the commencement of the series, and

(i) the consideration for the acquisition of the share did not exceed the lesser of the cost or adjusted cost base of the share to the employee immediately before the acquisition and the acquisition of the share was provided for in an employee share purchase agreement, under which the employee acquired the share, in order to protect the employee against any loss in respect of the share, or

(ii) the consideration for the acquisition of the share did not exceed its fair market value, immediately before the acquisition, and the acquisition of the share was provided for in an employee share purchase agreement, under which the employee acquired the share, in order to provide a market for the share.

(5) Amalgamation — Where an acquiring corporation has been formed as a result of an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by section 87) of two or more predecessor corporations,

(a) for the purposes of paragraph (4)(a), where the one or more persons or partnerships that controlled or were part of a group that controlled the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation did not control a predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation, that person or partnership or group of persons or partnerships that controlled the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation shall be deemed to have acquired control of that predecessor corporation; and

(b) for the purposes of paragraph (4)(b), where the shareholders that controlled the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation controlled a predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation and their degree of control of the acquiring corporation immediately after the amalgamation exceeded their degree of control of the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation, those shareholders shall be deemed to have increased their degree of control of the predecessor corporation.

(6) Prevailing provisions — Subsection (1) does not apply to an acquisition of a share of the capital stock of an acquiring corporation to the extent that subsection 84(8) or section 84.1 or 212.1 applied or subsection 110.6(8), 245(1.1) or 247(1) has been applied in respect of the acquisition or the transaction or series of transactions or events of which the acquisition was a part.

The budget proposes that the capital tax surcharge on large deposit-taking institutions, which was introduced in the 1995 budget, and extended in subsequent budgets, will be further extended to October 31, 2001. As announced by the Government in its June 25, 1999, paper Reforming Canada's Financial Services Sector, a review of the application of this surcharge is, however, underway and the results will be announced when the financial sector review legislation is tabled.

This surcharge applies to financial institutions as defined under Part VI of the Income Tax Act except life insurance companies. The surcharge will continue to apply at a rate of 12% of the capital tax imposed under Part VI, calculated before any credit for income taxes and with a capital deduction of $400 million. The surcharge is not eligible to be offset by tax payable under Part I of the Act.

The surcharge will be prorated for taxation years that straddle October 31, 2001.

Proposed Amendment — Application of S.C. 1998, c. 19 amendment to 190.11

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 121, will amend the application of the amendment made to s. 190.11 by S.C. 1998, c. 19, s. 206 to replace references to "1999" with "2001", applicable to taxation years that end after 1998.

Technical Notes: Subsection 190.1(1.1) of the Income Tax Act imposes an additional temporary Part VI tax on the taxable capital employed in Canada of life insurance corporations. Section 206 of the Income Tax Amendments Act, 1997 provided that deferred realized gains and losses of life insurance corporations on investment properties would not be added or deducted in computing the Part VI tax base. Consequential on the extension of the additional tax to December 31, 2000, this amendment extends the exclusion of deferred realized gains and losses in calculating the Part VI tax base to the same date.

(3) Where amalgamation of 2 or more corporations — For the purposes of this Part, where at any time in a taxation year and after 1971 there has been an amalgamation of 2 or more corporations at a time when one or more of the corporations (in this subsection referred to as a "controlled corporation") were controlled by another or others of those corporations (in this subsection referred to as a "controlling corporation"),

(a) each controlling corporation shall be deemed to have received a taxable dividend immediately before the amalgamation from each corporation controlled by it at that time,

(b) each such taxable dividend so received from a controlled corporation shall be deemed to have been paid out of the controlled corporation's designated surplus immediately before the amalgamation, and

(c) the amount of any such dividend so received by a controlling corporation from a corporation controlled by it shall be deemed to be the greater of

(i) the amount that would have been payable to it on the winding-up of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation if the subscribed capital had been repaid and what remained to be distributed on the winding-up were an amount equal to the designated surplus of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, and

(ii) the amount that would have been received by it as dividends on its shares of the capital stock of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, if at that time

(A) the maximum amount available for dividends were an amount equal to the designated surplus of the controlled corporation immediately before the amalgamation, and

(5) When dividend paid out of designated surplus — For the purpose of this section,

(a) where the amount of a corporation's earnings for a control period that was available for payment of dividends was, at the time a particular taxable dividend was paid, equal to or greater than the particular dividend plus all other taxable dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend, no part of the particular dividend shall be regarded as having been paid out of designated surplus; and

(b) in any other case, the portion of the particular dividend that shall be deemed to have been paid out of designated surplus is that proportion of the lesser of

(i) the aggregate of the particular dividend and all other taxable dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend, minus the amount, if any, of the payer corporation's earnings for the control period that was available for payment of dividends at that time, and

(ii) the designated surplus of the payer corporation immediately before that time, that the particular dividend is of the aggregate of the particular dividend and all other dividends paid by the payer corporation at the same time as the particular dividend.

(6) Where dividends paid at same time on more than one class of shares — For the purpose of subsection (5), where a corporation has, at the same time, paid dividends on its issued shares of different classes and one of the classes of shares had full voting rights under all circumstances and another had not, the dividends on the shares of the class that had full voting rights under all circumstances shall be deemed to have been paid immediately after the dividends on the other shares.

(8) Meaning of "control period" — In this section "control period" means the period from the commencement of the payer corporation's taxation year in which the control was acquired to the end of the taxation year in which the dividend was paid.

PART X.2 — TAX IN RESPECT OF REGISTERED INVESTMENTS

204.4 (1) Definition of "registered investment" — In this Part, "registered investment" means a trust or a corporation that has applied in prescribed form as of a particular date in the year of application and has been accepted by the Minister as of that date as a registered investment for one or more of the following:

(a) registered retirement savings plans,

(b) [Repealed under former Act]

(c) registered retirement income funds, and

(d) deferred profit sharing plans and that has not been notified by the Minister that it is no longer registered under this Part.

Proposed Amendment — Segregated fund policies

Department of Finance news release, December 19, 1996: Issuers of segregated fund policies will be allowed to elect to have their segregated funds registered under Part X.2 of the Act. The result of this election would be to exclude interests in registered segregated funds from the "foreign property" definition. However, as a consequence of the election in respect of a segregated fund, the issuer of the segregated fund would be required to pay any penalty tax under Part XI of the Act in respect of foreign property holdings of the segregated fund. [For the rest of this proposal, see under 206(1)"foreign property" — ed.]

Department of Finance news release, October 23, 1997: 4. Registered Investments

Under the proposed rules, Revenue Canada will be able to accept a segregated fund as a registered investment under subsection 204.4(1) of the Income Tax Act. If a segregated fund is accepted, an interest in the fund will not be a foreign property for the purposes of the Act. However, the insurer administering the segregated fund will be subject to tax under Part XI of the Act if the foreign property held by the segregated fund ever exceeds the 20 per cent foreign property limit.

The proposed amendments include a transitional provision. If a segregated fund that was created before 1997 is accepted by Revenue Canada as a registered investment under subsection 204.4(1) of the Act, the foreign property limit under Part XI in respect of the fund will be 60 per cent in 1999 and 40 per cent in 2000. [For the rest of this proposal, see under 206(1)"foreign property" — ed.]

Related Provisions: 248(1)"registered investment" — Definition applies to entire Act.

PART X.3 — LABOUR-SPONSORED VENTURE CAPITAL CORPORATIONS

Proposed Amendment — Part X.3

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 16, 1999: RRSP withdrawals under the Home Buyers' Plan (HBP) and the Lifelong Learning Plan (LLP)

The HBP and the LLP allow a qualifying individual to withdraw RRSP funds on a tax-free basis to purchase a home or to pay for education. HBP withdrawals are repayable over a 15-year period, while LLP withdrawals are repayable over a 10-year period. To the extent that a scheduled repayment for a year is not made, it is added in computing the participant's income for the year.

The Quebec government has proposed to allow individuals to withdraw proceeds from the redemption of provincial LSVCC shares held within an RRSP, without the provincial LSVCC credit being recovered if the withdrawal is made under the HBP or the LLP. Under existing law, the federal credit will not be recovered in these circumstances. Individuals making such withdrawals are expected to acquire replacement shares in annual amounts determined under the existing HBP and LLP repayment schedules. These replacement purchases are not eligible for the Quebec LSVCC credit. Where an individual fails to acquire LSVCC replacement shares, a special Quebec tax of 15 per cent of the shortfall is imposed on the individual to recover the LSVCC credit that Quebec provided on the purchase of the redeemed shares.

The budget proposes that purchases of replacement shares in Quebec LSVCCs likewise not be eligible for the federal LSVCC credit. In addition, where an individual fails to acquire a replacement share, it is proposed to levy a federal penalty tax that matches the special 15 per cent Quebec tax. These proposals will apply from the date the corresponding Quebec proposals apply.

Similar changes are not contemplated for federally-registered LSVCCs or LSVCCs registered in other provinces. Because shares in Quebec LSVCCs are not normally redeemable until retirement, amounts on which an LSVCC credit was paid will be available for small business investment for a considerable period of time even if withdrawn under the HBP or the LLP for part of that time. In contrast, because shares in federally-registered LSVCCs or in LSVCCs registered in other provinces may generally be redeemed without a recovery of the federal credit after eight years, it would be inappropriate to allow the amounts invested in these shares not to be available for small business investment for any length of time in that period.

Proposed Amendment — Redemption Requirements

Department of Finance news release, February 7, 2000: Finance Minister Announces Minor Changes To The Redemption Requirements For Federal LSVCCS

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced that he would propose a minor change affecting federally-registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs). The proposed change provides an exemption from the rules governing the recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit.

Shares in federally-registered LSVCCs that qualify for the federal LSVCC tax credit must be held for a minimum period. Where a share is redeemed prior to the expiry of the minimum period, the federal LSVCC tax credit for the share is generally recovered. In the case of shares issued before March 6, 1996, there is no recovery of the tax credit for a share redeemed more than five years after the day on which the share was issued. For shares issued after March 5, 1996, the recovery applies where a share is redeemed less than eight years after the day on which it was issued.

The proposed change will, for the purpose of the recovery provisions, treat a share redeemed in February or on March 1st as having been redeemed 30 days later. For example, existing LSVCC shares issued on March 1, 1995 and redeemed on February 29, 2000 would be exempt from a recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit that was associated with the original acquisition of the shares.

This measure is intended to accommodate taxpayers wishing to acquire new LSVCC shares in the first 60 days of a year with the proceeds from the redemption of LSVCC shares. In these circumstances, a taxpayer would generally be entitled to claim a tax credit for the preceding year in respect of an acquisition of the new shares and would not be subject to a tax penalty with respect to the redemption of the existing shares. In addition, any necessary changes will be made to ensure that an LSVCC's registration cannot be revoked as a result of having redeemed LSVCC shares in these circumstances. It is proposed that this change apply from the inception of the rules governing the recovery of the LSVCC tax credit.

Proposed Amendment — Shares redeemed from Feb. 1 to March 1

Department of Finance news release, February 7, 2000: Finance Minister Announces Minor Change to the Redemption Requirements for Federal LSVCCs

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced that he would propose a minor change affecting federally-registered labour-sponsored venture capital corporations (LSVCCs). The proposed change provides an exemption from the rules governing the recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit.

Shares in federally-registered LSVCCs that qualify for the federal LSVCC tax credit must be held for a minimum period.

Where a share is redeemed prior to the expiry of the minimum period, the federal LSVCC tax credit for the share is generally recovered. In the case of shares issued before March 6, 1996, there is no recovery of the tax credit for a share redeemed more than five years after the day on which the share was issued. For shares issued after March 5, 1996, the recovery applies where a share is redeemed less than eight years after the day on which it was issued.

The proposed change will, for the purpose of the recovery provisions, treat a share redeemed in February or on March 1st as having been redeemed 30 days later. For example, existing LSVCC shares issued on March 1, 1995 and redeemed on February 29, 2000 would be exempt from a recovery of the federal LSVCC tax credit that was associated with the original acquisition of the shares.

This measure is intended to accommodate taxpayers wishing to acquire new LSVCC shares in the first 60 days of a year with the proceeds from the redemption of LSVCC shares. In these circumstances, a taxpayer would generally be entitled to claim a tax credit for the preceding year in respect of an acquisition of the new shares and would not be subject to a tax penalty with respect to the redemption of the existing shares. In addition, any necessary changes will be made to ensure that an LSVCC's registration cannot be revoked as a result of having redeemed LSVCC shares in these circumstances. It is proposed that this change apply from the inception of the rules governing the recovery of the LSVCC tax credit.

(iv) if the corporation so elects in writing filed with the Minister not more than six months after the end of the year and is not a revoked corporation at the end of the year, the fair market value at the end of the year of all shares of classes, of the capital stock of the corporation, to which clause 204.81(1)(c)(ii)(C) applies,

C is the fair market value at the end of the year of all shares issued by it, and

D is the amount by which the shareholders' equity in the corporation at the end of the year has been reduced to take into account the expected subsequent redemption of shares of the capital stock of the corporation; and

(d) the adjusted cost to the corporation of an eligible investment of the corporation at any time is

(i) 150% of the cost to the corporation of the eligible investment at that time where the eligible investment is

(A) a property acquired by the corporation after February 18, 1997 (other than a property to which subparagraph (i.1) applies) that would be an eligible investment of the corporation if the reference to "$50,000,000" in paragraph (f) of the definition "eligible investment" in subsection 204.8(1) were read as "$10,000,000", or

(B) a share of the capital stock of a prescribed corporation,

(5) Transfers between plans — For the purposes of this Part, if property held by a trust governed by a registered education savings plan (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor plan") is distributed at a particular time to a trust governed by another registered education savings plan (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee plan"),

(a) except as provided by paragraphs (b) and (c), the amount of the distribution is deemed not to have been contributed into the transferee plan;

(d) where subparagraph (c)(i) or (ii) applies in respect of the distribution, the amount of the distribution is deemed not to have been withdrawn from the transferor plan; and

206. (1) Definitions — In this Part,

"affiliate" of a corporation (in this definition referred to as the "parent corporation") at any time is any other corporation where, at that time,

(a) the parent corporation controls the other corporation,

(b) the parent corporation or a corporation controlled by the parent corporation owns

(i) shares of the capital stock of the other corporation that would give the parent corporation or the corporation controlled by the parent corporation 25% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at an annual meeting of shareholders of that other corporation, and

(ii) shares of the capital stock of the other corporation having a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of that other corporation, or

(c) the other corporation is controlled by a particular corporation and the parent corporation or a corporation controlled by the parent corporation owns

(i) shares of the capital stock of the particular corporation that would give the parent corporation or the corporation controlled by the parent corporation 25% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at an annual meeting of shareholders of the particular corporation, and

(ii) shares of the capital stock of the particular corporation having a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of the particular corporation;

Related Provisions: 256(6), (6.1) — Meaning of "controlled".

History: The definition "affiliate" added to subsec. 206(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 210(3), applicable to shares and indebtedness acquired after December 4, 1985 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before 5:00 p.m. E.S.T. on December 4, 1985).

"carrying value" of a property of a corporation or partnership at any time means

(a) where a balance sheet of the corporation or the partnership as of that time was presented to the shareholders of the corporation or the members of the partnership and the balance sheet was prepared using generally accepted accounting principles and was not prepared using the equity or consolidation method of accounting, the amount in respect of the property reflected in the balance sheet, and

(b) in any other case, the amount that would have been reflected in a balance sheet of the corporation or the partnership as of that time if the balance sheet had been prepared in accordance with generally acceptable accounting principles and neither the equity nor consolidation method of accounting were used;

History: The definition "carrying value" added to subsec. 206(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 210(3), applicable to shares and indebtedness acquired after December 4, 1985 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before 5:00 p.m. E.S.T. on December 4, 1985).

Proposed Addition — 206(1)"cost amount"

"cost amount" at any time of a taxpayer's capital interest in a trust that is foreign property is deemed to be the greater of

(a) the cost amount of the interest, determined without reference to this definition, and

(b) where that time is more than 60 days after the end of a taxation year of the trust, the amount that would be the cost amount of the interest if new units of the trust had been issued in satisfaction of each amount payable

(i) after 2000 and at or before the end of the taxation year, by the trust in respect of the interest,

(ii) to which subparagraph 53(2)(h)(i.1) applies (or would apply if that subparagraph were read without reference to clauses (A) and (B) of that subparagraph), and

(iii) that has not been satisfied at or before that time by the issue of new units of the trust or by a payment of an amount by the trust;

Related Provisions: 108(1)"cost amount" — Cost amount of capital interest in a trust.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 98(1), will add the definition "cost amount" to subsec. 206(1), applicable to months that end after February 2001.

Technical Notes: Part XI of the Act provides a foreign property limit for certain taxpayers, mainly tax-exempt taxpayers such as trusts governed by registered retirement savings plans and registered pension plans. In general, a penalty tax is applied under subsection 206(2) where the total cost amount of foreign property in such a trust or plan exceeds a specified percentage of the total cost amount of all property in the trust or plan.

Where such a taxpayer holds a capital interest in a trust, the income of the trust is usually made payable to the taxpayer so that the income is not taxed at the trust level. Arrangements have been made, however, to "capitalize" income and other amounts payable without the trust issuing new units or otherwise making a payment in satisfaction of the amounts. These arrangements are designed to maximize the indirect foreign property holdings for these unitholders by minimizing the cost amount with regard to these capital interests.

Subsection 206(1) is amended to add a special definition of 'cost amount" for the purposes of Part XI. The definition is designed to increase the cost amount of a taxpayer's interest in a trust to reflect capitalized amounts payable to the taxpayer. It is also intended to amend Part L of the Regulations to make it clear that the definition also applies for this purpose.

"designated value" of a property at any time means the greater of

(a) the fair market value at that time of the property, and

(b) the carrying value at that time of the property;

History: The definition "designated value" added to subsec. 206(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 210(3), applicable to shares and indebtedness acquired after December 4, 1985 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before 5:00 p.m. E.S.T. on December 4, 1985).

"excluded share" means

(a) a share that is of a class of shares listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, where no share of that class has been issued after December 4, 1985 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before 5:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time on December 4, 1985),

(b) a share last acquired after 1995 that is of a class of shares listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, where

(i) no share of that class has been issued after July 20, 1995 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before July 21, 1995), and

(ii) the share would not be foreign property if the expression "primarily from foreign property" in paragraph (d.1) of the definition "foreign property" in this subsection were read as "primarily from portfolio investments in property that is foreign property" and that paragraph were read without reference to "(other than an excluded share)", and

(c) a share last acquired after 1995 as a consequence of the exercise of a right acquired before 1996 where the share would not be foreign property if the expression "primarily from foreign property" in paragraph (d.1) of the definition "foreign property" in this subsection were read as "primarily from portfolio investments in property that is foreign property" and that paragraph were read without reference to "(other than an excluded share)";

History: The definition "excluded share" added to subsec. 206(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 210(3), applicable to shares and indebtedness acquired after December 4, 1985 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing made before 5:00 p.m. E.S.T. on December 4, 1985).

Regulations: 3200 (prescribed stock exchange in Canada; will be amended to apply to this definition).

"foreign property" means

(a) tangible property situated outside Canada except automotive equipment registered in Canada,

(b) automotive equipment not registered in Canada pursuant to the laws of Canada or a province,

(c) intangible property (other than any property described in paragraphs (d) to (g)) situated outside Canada including, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, any patent under the laws of a country other than Canada and any licence in respect thereof,

(d) any share of the capital stock of a corporation other than a Canadian corporation,

(d.1) except as provided by subsection (1.1), any share (other than an excluded share) of the capital stock of, or any debt obligation issued by, a corporation (other than an investment corporation, mutual fund corporation or registered investment) that is a Canadian corporation, where shares of the corporation can reasonably be considered to derive their value, directly or indirectly, primarily from foreign property,

(e) except as prescribed, any share of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation or investment corporation that is not a registered investment, other than a share of the capital stock of an investment corporation that was last acquired before October 14, 1971,

(f) any property that, under the terms or conditions thereof or any agreement relating thereto, is convertible into, is exchangeable for or confers a right to acquire, property that is foreign property, but not including property that is

(i) a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada, or

(ii) a right issued before 1984 and listed on a prescribed stock exchange in Canada to acquire a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation,

Proposed Amendment — "foreign property" — segregated fund annuity contracts

Department of Finance news release, December 19, 1996: (c) Foreign Property

An interest in an annuity contract will be "foreign property" for the purposes of the Act if the annuity contract is a segregated fund policy and more than 20% of the segregated fund's assets are "foreign property". As a consequence, if an RRSP or RRIF trust or any other taxpayer described in paragraphs 204(1)(a) to (f) of the Act acquires such a foreign property, it will be included in the 20% foreign property limit set out in Part XI of the Act.

If an insurer issues interests in one or more registered annuity policies directly to an RRSP or RRIF annuitant or to a registered pension plan (RPP), the insurer will be likewise liable to pay a monthly foreign property penalty tax in respect of each RRSP annuitant, RRIF annuitant and RPP equal to the amount, if positive, determined by the formula:

$$1\% \times (A - (20\% \times B))$$

where

A is the total of all premiums and other amounts paid on account of the acquisition by the RRSP annuitant, RRIF annuitant or RPP, as the case may be, of such of those interests outstanding at the end of the month as constitute foreign property, and

B is the total of all premiums and other amounts paid on account of the acquisition by the RRSP annuitant, RRIF annuitant or RPP, as the case may be, of such of those interests as are outstanding at the end of the month.

Issuers of segregated fund policies will be allowed to elect to have their segregated funds registered under Part X.2 of the Act. The result of this election would be to exclude interests in registered segregated funds from the "foreign property" definition. However, as a consequence of the election in respect of a segregated fund, the issuer of the segregated fund would be required to pay any penalty tax under Part XI of the Act in respect of foreign property holdings of the segregated fund.

Department of Finance news release, October 23, 1997: Application of Foreign Property Limit to Segregated Funds

1. Introduction

The new foreign property rules for segregated funds will apply in three situations.

First, they will apply where an interest in a segregated fund is held by a tax-exempt taxpayer described in paragraphs 205(a) to (f) of the Income Tax Act, such as a registered pension plan (RPP), a trust governed by a registered retirement savings plan (RRSP) or a trust governed by a registered retirement income fund (RRIF). Such taxpayers are subject to tax under Part XI of the Act if they invest too heavily in "foreign property". Under the proposed changes, an interest in a segregated fund will, in some circumstances, become a "foreign property" and the holding of such an interest can result in Part XI tax becoming payable.

A similar penalty tax may apply where an interest in a segregated fund policy is held directly as an RRSP or RRIF (i.e., outside of an RRSP or RRIF trust), or where such an interest is issued under an RPP that is not an RPP trust or corporation. The tax will generally be collected by the insurer that issued the segregated fund policy on behalf of the policyholder that is liable to pay it.

Third, the new rules can result in Part XI tax for an insurer where the Minister accepts a segregated fund administered by the insurer as a "registered investment" under proposed amendments to Part X.2 of the Act.

The application of the proposed rules to these three situations is described below.

2. Tax payable under Part XI of the Income Tax Act by trusts governed by RRSPs, RRIFs and RPPs

General

A trust governed by an RRSP, RRIF or RPP is generally liable to pay a penalty tax under subsection 206(2) of the Act in respect of a month where the cost amount to the trust of the "foreign property" (as defined in subsection 206(1)) held by the trust exceeds 20 per cent of the cost amount to the trust of all property held by it.

Under paragraph (i) of the definition "foreign property", an interest in a trust is a foreign property, except where the trust is a "registered investment" or where the interest in the trust is prescribed not to be a foreign property under the Income Tax Regulations. Under the proposed amendments, after 1998, an interest in a segregated fund will be a treated as an interest in a trust for the purpose of Part XI. As a consequence, a trust governed by an RRSP, RRIF or RPP that holds a segregated fund policy in any month that ends after 1998 may be liable to pay the penalty tax under Part XI.

When is an Interest in a Segregated Fund Prescribed Not to be a Foreign Property?

The proposed amendments include a number of transitional provisions described below. However, section 5000 of the Regulations will prescribe an interest in a segregated fund held at a particular time not to be a foreign property in two cases:

- where the particular time is after 1999 and, throughout the last year that ended before the particular time (or at the end of the year that includes the particular time, if the fund was created in the year that includes the particular time), the total cost amount of all the foreign property held by the segregated fund does not exceed 20 per cent of the cost amount of all the property held by it; or

- where each policyholder holding an interest in the segregated fund at the particular time held an interest in the fund at the end of 1996 or acquired the interest from another policyholder who held an interest in the fund before 1997.

Transitional rules are proposed for 1999, 2000 and 2001 to give insurers an opportunity to shift the properties held by the segregated funds that they administer from foreign properties to non-foreign properties. To this end, an interest in a segregated fund will be prescribed not to be a foreign property in 1999 where:

- the segregated fund was created before 1997 and, at any time in the first 90 days of 1998, the fair market value (FMV) of all the foreign property held by the fund does not exceed 80 per cent of the FMV of all the property held by the fund;

- the segregated fund was created in 1997 or 1998 and, at any time in the first 90 days of its 1998 taxation year, the FMV of all the foreign property held by the fund does not exceed 20 per cent of the FMV of all of the property held by the fund; or

- the segregated fund was created in 1999 and, at the end of 1999, the cost amount of all of the foreign property held by the fund does not exceed 20 per cent of the cost amount of all of the property held by the fund.

In 2000, an interest in a segregated fund will be prescribed not to be a foreign property if the segregated fund was created before 1997 and, throughout 1999, the cost amount of all the foreign property held by the segregated fund does not exceed 60 per cent of the cost amount of all the property held by the fund.

In 2001, an interest in a segregated fund will be prescribed not to be a foreign property if the segregated fund was created before 1997 and, throughout 2000, the cost amount of all the foreign property held by the segregated fund does not exceed 40 per cent of the cost amount of all the property held by the segregated fund.

"Cost Amount" for the Purposes of Part XI of the Act

Under the proposed amendments, where an interest in a segregated fund is, after 1998, treated as "foreign property", the "cost amount" of the interest will be determined on a lagged basis.

Specifically, the "cost amount" of an interest in a segregated fund to an RRSP trust, RRIF trust or RPP will be its adjusted cost base (ACB), except that the ACB adjustments that would otherwise be required in a particular calendar year will not be made until after March of the following calendar year. An interest in a segregated fund will have a known constant ACB throughout each year as ACB adjustments in respect of the year will not be made until the following year, making it possible for taxpayers subject to the foreign property penalty tax to comply with the foreign property limit on an on-going basis.

3. New Foreign Property Limits with respect to Segregated Fund Policies Issued or Effected as RRSPs or RRIFs and Policies Issued under RPPs

Segregated Fund Policies Issued or Effected as RRSPs or RRIFs

The new rules will also apply where, after 1998, an individual holds an interest in a segregated fund directly as an RRSP or RRIF (i.e., outside a RRSP or RRIF trust). In general, the policyholder's liability for penalty tax will be determined on a policy-by-policy basis. Where the penalty tax is owing, the insurer that issued the segregated fund will be required to collect the penalty tax on behalf of the policyholder.

A policyholder will be liable to pay the penalty tax in respect of a segregated fund policy for any month where the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis as described above) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds under the policy that are foreign properties exceeds 20 per cent of the total of

- the cash surrender value of the policy at the end of the month (not including any amount in respect of an interest in a segregated fund), and

- the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds under the policy.

For this purpose, whether an interest in a segregated fund is a foreign property is determined using the definition of "foreign property" described above.

Where an insurer has issued interests in more than one segregated fund policy, the insurer will be able to treat those policies as one policy for purposes of calculating how much penalty tax is payable. The election will allow policies that derive their value largely from foreign property to be offset by policies that derive their value largely from non-foreign property.

Segregated Fund Policies Issued under RPPs

The administrator of an RPP (other than an RPP trust or corporation) may also be liable to pay foreign property tax where the RPP is funded or partially funded by an interest in a segregated fund policy.

The administrator's liability will be determined on an insurer-by-insurer basis. As a consequence, all the segregated fund policies used to fund the RPP that were issued by a particular insurer will be grouped together for this purpose. The administrator will be liable to pay tax in a given month in respect of the policies issued by a particular insurer where the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis as described above) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds that arise under the policies and that are foreign properties exceeds 20 per cent of the total of

- the cash surrender values, at the end of the month, of all the policies (not including any amount in respect of an interest in a segregated fund), and

- the total cost amount (determined on a lagged basis) at the end of the month of all the interests in segregated funds that arise under the policies.

For this purpose, whether an interest in a segregated fund is a foreign property will be determined using the definition of "foreign property" described above.

Where an RPP is funded with segregated fund policies issued by more than one insurer, the administrator of the RPP will be able to elect to treat all such insurers as one insurer for purposes of determining its penalty tax liability. Where the policies issued by one insurer have a high foreign property content, the election will make it possible for an administrator to offset that high foreign property content with the non-foreign property content of policies issued by other insurers.

The responsibility for collecting and remitting an administrator's penalty tax falls on the insurer, unless the administrator makes the election to treat all insurers as one. Where this election is made, the responsibility for collecting and remitting the penalty tax falls on the administrator.

Federal budget, supplementary information, February 28, 2000: Extension of FPR Rules to Segregated Funds

Although the FPR currently applies to mutual funds which issue units to deferred income plans, there is currently no legislation providing for its application to segregated funds. Segregated funds are insurance products offered by life insurers which are broadly analogous to mutual funds. As announced by the Minister of Finance by press release on October 27, 1998, proposed rules to extend the FPR to segregated funds were to be effective as of January 2001.

The FPR for segregated funds will contain the same one-year lag as is provided for mutual funds (i.e., an interest in a mutual fund is generally not treated as foreign property during a year, provided the mutual fund satisfied the FPR limit throughout the previous year). In order to provide a better opportunity for insurance companies to institute systems changes to allow foreign property levels to be monitored for segregated funds, the budget proposes that the FPR for segregated funds apply after 2001 (rather than after 2000).

Proposed Amendment — 206(3.1)

Letter from Department of Finance, November 17, 1998: Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of November 3, 1998 to Simon Thompson concerning subsection 206(3.1) of the Income Tax Act.

We understand that an arrangement of a Canadian corporation is proposed under section 182 of the Ontario Business Corporations Act. We understand that all shareholders of the Canadian corporation will be required, if specified levels of shareholder support are achieved in connection with an upcoming vote on the arrangement, to exchnage their shares for the capital stock of a corporation resident in the United States or, in the case of dissenting shareholders, for cash. We assume, for this purpose, that the shares of the capital stock of the Canadian corporation are not "foreign property" under Part XI of the Incomce Tax Act.

We agree that, in these circumstances, it would be appropriate to extend subection 206(3.1) of the Income Tax Act so that it applies in all cases to the shares of the U.S. corporation acquired on such an exchange by a taxpayer described in any of paragraphs 205(a) to (f). Such an extension would, in general terms, have the effect pursuant to subparagraph 206(2)(a)(iii) of treating these shares as not being foreign property under Part XI for up to 24 months. We will recommend that this amendment apply for months ending after 1997.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
Director General
Tax Legislation Division

Related Provisions: 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired.

History: Subsec. 206(3.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 120(2), applicable to months ending after December 20, 1991.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-412R2: Foreign property of registered plans.

(4) Non-arm's length transactions — For the purposes of this Part, where a taxpayer has acquired property from a person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length for no consideration or for consideration less than the fair market value thereof at the time of the acquisition, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired the property at that fair market value, and for those purposes, a trust shall be deemed not to deal at arm's length with another trust if any person is beneficially interested in both trusts.

Proposed Amendment — 206(4)

(4) Non-arm's length transactions — For the purposes of this Part, where at any time a taxpayer acquires property, otherwise than pursuant to a transfer of property to which paragraph (f) or (g) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) applies, from a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length for no consideration or for consideration less than the fair market value of the property at that time, the taxpayer is deemed to acquire the property at that fair market value, and for those purposes, a particular trust is deemed not to deal at arm's length with another trust if a person who is beneficially interested in the particular trust is at that time also beneficially interested in the other trust.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 98(2), will amend subsec. 206(4) to read as above, applicable in respect of property acquired after December 17, 1999.

Technical Notes: Subsection 206(4) of the Act provides, for the purposes of Part XI, that property acquired by a taxpayer from a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length and for less than fair market value consideration is treated as having been acquired at its fair market value at the time of its acquisition. For these purposes, trusts that have the same beneficiary are considered not to deal with each other at arm's length.

Subsection 206(4) is amended so that it does not apply to a transfer of property to which paragraph (f) or (g) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) applies. In conjunction with subsection 248(25.1), this amendment is intended to ensure that where a transfer of property is one to which either of those paragraphs applies and that involves a taxpayer to which subsection 206(4) would otherwise apply, the transfer will occur on a rollover basis.

This amendment applies in respect of property acquired after December 17, 1999.

This amendment is part of a set of amendments intended to clarify the tax treatment of transfers of property involving RRSPs and RRIFs. For further detail, see the commentary to paragraphs 107.4(2)(b) and (3)(c), paragraphs (f) and (g) of the new definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1), and subsection 248(25.1).

Proposed Amendment — 210.1(b)

Letter from Department of Finance, May 12, 1999:

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter of May 3, 1999 to Simon Thompson.

We note that Part XII.2 tax does not apply to a trust for a taxation year if the trust has been a mutual fund trust throughout the year. In policy terms, we think that it is not appropriate that a trust's exemption from Part XII.2 tax for a taxation year is lost merely because the trust ceases in the year to be a mutual fund trust because of the application of paragraph 132(6)(c) of the Income Tax Act.

Consequently, we are prepared to recommend a relieving amendment in these circumstances that would apply to a trust for a taxation year if the trust was a mutual fund trust at the beginning of the year. The amendment would apply to the trust only if the trust would, but for that paragraph, have been a mutual fund trust throughout the portion of the year during which it is in existence. In these circumstances, the trust will be treated for the purposes of the Act as having been a mutual fund trust throughout the relevant taxation year. We are prepared to recommend that this amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director
Tax Legislation Division
Tax Policy Branch

(c) a trust that was exempt from tax under Part I by reason of subsection 149(1);

(d) a trust described in paragraph (a) or (c) of the definition of that expression in subsection 108(1); or

Proposed Amendment — 210.1(d)

(d) a trust described in paragraph (a), (a.1) or (c) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1); or

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 100, will amend para. 210.1(d) to read as above, applicable to 1999 et seq.

Technical Notes: Section 210.1 of the Act provides a list of trusts to which Part XII.2 does not apply.

Paragraph 210.1(d) is amended to add to the list of exempt trusts a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1). This change is strictly consequential to the introduction of paragraph (a.1) of that definition. For further detail on the amended definition "trust" in subsection 108(1), see the commentary on that provision.

This amendment applies to the 1999 and subsequent taxation years.

(e) a non-resident trust.

Related Provisions: 253 — Extended meaning of carrying on business.

Pre-RSC History: S. 210.1 added by 1988, c. 55, s. 160, applicable to 1988 et seq.

Definitions [s. 210.1]: "mutual fund trust" — 132(6)–(7), 132.2(1)(q), 248(1); "non-resident" — 248(1); "taxation year" — 249; "testamentary trust" — 108(1), 248(1); "trust" — 104(1), 248(1), (3).

210.2 (1) Tax on income of trust — Subject to section 210.3, where an amount in respect of the income of a trust for a taxation year is or would, if all beneficiaries under the trust were persons resident in Canada to whom Part I was applicable, be included in computing the income under Part I of a person by reason of subsection 104(13) or 105(2), the trust shall pay a tax under this Part in respect of the year equal to 36% of the least of

(a) the designated income of the trust for the year,

(b) the amount that, but for subsections 104(6) and (30), would be the income of the trust for the year, and

(c) 100/64 of the amount deducted under paragraph 104(6)(b) in computing the trust's income under Part I for the year.

Related Provisions: 18(1)(t) — Tax under Part XII.2 is deductible; 104(30) — Part XII.2 tax deductible in computing income of trust; 210.3 — Where no tax payable.

(1.1) Amateur athlete trusts — Notwithstanding section 210.1, where an amount described in subsection 143.1(2) in respect of an amateur athlete trust would, if Part I were applicable, be required to be included in computing the income for a taxation year of a designated beneficiary under the trust, the trust shall pay a tax under this Part in respect of the year equal to 36% of 100/64 of that amount.

(2) Designated income — For the purposes of subsection (1), the designated income of a trust for a taxation year means the amount that, but for subsections 104(6), (12) and (30), would be the income of the trust for the year determined under section 3 if

(a) it had no income other than taxable capital gains from dispositions described in paragraph (b) and incomes from

(i) real properties in Canada (other than Canadian resource properties),

(ii) timber resource properties,

(iii) Canadian resource properties (other than properties acquired by the trust before 1972), and

(iv) businesses carried on in Canada;

(b) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of property that would have been taxable Canadian property if, at no time in the year, the trust had been resident in Canada; and

Proposed Amendment — 210.2(2)(b)

(b) the only taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses referred to in paragraph 3(b) were from dispositions of taxable Canadian property; and

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 101, will amend para. 210.2(2)(b) to read as above, applicable after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: The tax under Part XII.2 of the Act is calculated with reference to a trust's "designated income" (as determined under subsection 210.2(2)). "Designated income" is calculated with reference to taxable capital gains and allowable capital losses from dispositions of the trust's taxable Canadian property, determined on the assumption that the trust is non-resident.

Paragraph 210.2(2)(b) is amended to remove the assumption described above. The amendment merely simplifies paragraph 210.2(2)(b) and does not represent any policy change.

This amendment applies after October 1, 1996.

(c) the only losses referred to in paragraph 3(d) were losses from sources described in subparagraphs (a)(i) to (iv),

Related Provisions: 104(7.01)(b)(i) — No deduction under 104(6) for designated income of trust.

(3) Tax deemed paid by beneficiary — Where an amount (in this subsection and subsection 210.3(2) referred to as the "income amount") in respect of the income of a trust for a taxation year is, by reason of subsection 104(13) or 105(2), included in computing

(a) the income under Part I of a person who was not at any time in the year a designated beneficiary under the trust, or

(b) the income of a non-resident person (other than a person who, at any time in the year, would be a designated beneficiary under the trust if section 210 were read without reference to paragraph 210(a)) that is subject to tax under Part I by reason of subsection 2(3) and is not exempt from tax under Part I by reason of a provision contained in a tax convention or agreement with another country that has the force of law in Canada,

an amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{C}$$

where

A is the tax paid under this Part by the trust for the year,

B is the income amount in respect of the person, and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is or would be, if all beneficiaries under the trust were persons resident in Canada to whom Part I was applicable, included in computing the income under Part I of a beneficiary under the trust by reason of subsection 104(13) or 105(2) in respect of the year, shall, if designated by the trust in respect of the person in its return for the year under this Part, be deemed to be an amount paid on account of the person's tax payable under Part I for the person's taxation year in which the taxation year of the trust ends, on the day that is 90 days after the end of the taxation year of the trust.

Related Provisions: 104(31) — Amount deemed payable by trust to beneficiary; 210.3(2) — Where non-resident beneficiary already taxed in Canada.

(4) Designations in respect of partnerships — Where a taxpayer is a member of a partnership in respect of which an amount is designated by a trust for a taxation year of the trust (in this subsection referred to as the "particular year") under subsection (3),

(a) no amount shall be deemed to be paid on account of the partnership's tax payable under Part I by reason of subsection (3) except in the application of that subsection for the purposes of subsection 104(31), and

(b) an amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{C}$$

where

A is the amount so designated,

B is the amount that may reasonably be regarded as the share of the taxpayer in the designated income of the trust received by the partnership in the fiscal period of the partnership in which the particular year ends (that fiscal period being referred to in this subsection as the "partnership's period"), and

C is the designated income received by the partnership from the trust in the partnership's period, shall be deemed to be an amount paid on account of the taxpayer's tax payable under Part I for the person's taxation year in which the partnership's period ends, on the last day of that year.

(5) Returns — A trust shall, within 90 days after the end of each taxation year,

(a) file with the Minister a return for the year under this Part in prescribed form and containing prescribed information, without notice or demand therefor;

(b) estimate in the return the amount of tax, if any, payable by it under this Part for the year; and

(c) pay to the Receiver General the tax, if any, payable by it under this Part for the year.

Related Provisions: 150.1(5) — Electronic filing.

Forms: T3 SCH 10: Calculation of Part XII.2 tax and Part XIII non-resident withholding tax.

(6) Liability of trustee — A trustee of a trust is personally liable to pay to the Receiver General on behalf of the trust the full amount of any tax payable by the trust under this Part to the extent that the amount is not paid to the Receiver General within the time specified in subsection (5), and the trustee is entitled to recover from the trust any such amount paid by the trustee.

Proposed Amendment — 212(1)(b)(vii)

Letter from Department of Finance, February 18, 1999:

Dear [xxx]

SUBJECT: December 23, 1998 Draft Legislation Trust proposals

This is in reply to your letter of February 15, 1999 regarding the applicability of the withholding tax exemption in subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii) of the Income Tax Act.

Your concern relates to debt issued through a trust indenture, pursuant to which a non-resident financial institution acts as the trustee. The main function of the trustee is to administer and enforce the collective rights of a large group of lenders. Additionally, the trustee may act as paying agent for the disbursement of funds to lenders and is expected to receive funds from your client in this capacity, some of which in limited circumstances could be returned to your client. You are concerned about three of the proposed provisions in the December 23, 1998 draft legislation on trust: proposed subparagraph (e)(iii) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) and proposed paragraphs 248(25.1)(b) and 251(1)(b). You are of the view that these provisions could technically result in the loss of the Part XIII withholding tax exemption provided under subparagraph 212(1)(b)(vii), on the basis that your client could now be construed as making its interest payable to a non-arm's length trust.

We agree that modifications to the draft legislation should be made to address this concern. The draft amendments were not intended to result in a loss of this exemption from withholding tax in the circumstances described above.

Consequently, we will recommend changes to these provisions applying from the date of the release of the draft legislation [to] ensure that the intended policy result is achieved.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director
Tax Legislation Division
Tax Policy Branch

(viii) interest payable on a mortgage or similar obligation secured by, or on an agreement for sale or similar obligation with respect to, real property situated outside Canada or an interest in any such real property except to the extent that the interest payable on the obligation is deductible in computing the income of the payer under Part I from a business

carried on by the payer in Canada or from property other than real property situated outside Canada,

(ix) interest payable in Canadian currency on account of an amount in Canadian currency deposited in a country other than Canada with a branch or office of a payer who

(A) is, or is eligible to become, a member of the Canadian Payments Association, or

(B) is a credit union that is a shareholder or member of a body corporate or organization that is a central for the purposes of the Canadian Payments Association Act, to a person with whom the payer is dealing at arm's length,

(x) interest payable to a prescribed international organization or agency,

(xi) interest payable on an amount deposited with a prescribed financial institution for the period during which the amount was an eligible deposit (within the meaning assigned by subsection 33.1(1)) of the institution, and

(xii) interest payable under a securities lending arrangement by a lender under the arrangement that is a financial institution prescribed for the purpose of clause (iii)(D), or a registered securities dealer resident in Canada, on money provided to the lender either as collateral or as consideration for the particular security lent or transferred under the arrangement where

(A) the particular security is an obligation referred to in subparagraph (ii) or an obligation of the government of any country, province, state, municipality or other political subdivision,

(B) the amount of money so provided at any time during the term of the arrangement does not exceed 110% of the fair market value at that time of the particular security, and

(C) the arrangement was neither intended, nor made as a part of a series of securities lending arrangements, loans or other transactions that was intended, to be in effect for more than 270 days, and for the purpose of this paragraph, where interest is payable on an obligation, other than a prescribed obligation, and all or any portion of the interest is contingent or dependent on the use of or production from property in Canada or is computed by reference to revenue, profit, cash flow, commodity price or any other similar criterion or by reference to dividends paid or payable to shareholders of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, the interest shall be deemed not to be interest described in subparagraphs (ii) to (vii) and (ix);

Proposed Amendment — Authorized foreign bank

Notice of Ways and Means Motion (authorized foreign banks), February 11, 1999: (3) That, for the purposes of Part XIII of the Act, an authorized foreign bank be deemed, in respect of its business in Canada, to be a person resident in Canada.

(4) That an authorized foreign bank be subject to a tax equal to the product of

(a) 25% or such lesser rate as may apply, under an income tax treaty between Canada and the country in which the authorized foreign bank is resident, to interest payable by a person resident in Canada to a person resident in that country, and

(b) 15% of the amount described in subparagraph 2(b) [see under 20(1)(c) — ed.] in respect of the bank for the year.

Department of Finance news release, February 11, 1999: Withholding Tax on Interest

(a) Foreign banks deemed resident for purposes of Part XIII tax

Subject to certain exceptions and to tax treaties, Part XIII of the Income Tax Act imposes a withholding tax on, among other things, interest paid by residents of Canada to non-residents. To treat Canadian banks and the Canadian branches of foreign banks equally, it is proposed that Part XIII of the Act be amended to treat a Canadian branch of a foreign bank as resident in Canada for the purposes of applying that Part to interest and other payments made to or by the branch.

This change will also have the effect of ensuring that all banks operating in Canada have equal access to the securities lending market.

(b) Tax re: interest on allocated debt

Although it is proposed that Canadian branches of foreign banks be allowed a deduction on account of interest on "allocated debt" (see above [under 20(1)(c) — ed.]), the interest would not, under existing rules, be subject to withholding tax. As Canadian banks would, in some cases, be subject to withholding tax in respect of funds borrowed outside Canada, a new tax is proposed to apply to a portion of the interest deducted by the Canadian branch of a foreign bank in respect of its allocated debt.

[For other proposals see under 248(1)"authorized foreign bank" — ed.]

Proposed Amendment — 212(1)(c)(i)

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, subsec. 102(2), will amend subpara. 212(1)(c)(i) to read as above, applicable to amounts paid or credited after December 17, 1999.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 212(1)(c) of the Act generally provides that a non-resident beneficiary is subject to Part XIII withholding tax on trust distributions in connection with the same types of amounts on which a beneficiary resident in Canada is subject to tax under Part I.

Paragraph 212(1)(c) is amended to clarify that the tax consequences of a beneficiary's residence outside Canada will be taken into account in determining the amount subject to tax under paragraph 212(1)(c). These tax consequences include the potential indirect tax consequences to a beneficiary of a trust under subsection 104(13) of the application of subsection 107(5) to the trust because the beneficiary is non-resident.

This amendment, which is linked with new section 250.1, applies to amounts paid or credited after December 17, 1999.

(ii) can reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the estate or trust arrangement) to be a distribution of, or derived from, an amount received by the estate or trust as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a dividend on a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada, other than a taxable dividend;

Possible Future Amendment — Requirement for non-resident to post security

Letter from Department of Finance, June 17, 1996:

Mr. Donald H. Watkins, Chair, Taxation Section, The Canadian Bar Association

Mr. Robert Spindler, C.A., Chair, Taxation Committee, Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants

Dear Messrs. Watkins and Spindler:

At our recent meeting we discussed the possibility of revising the Canadian income tax rules governing the taxation of rental income earned by non-resident owners of Canadian real estate. This letter outlines a proposal that would, if implemented, place the risk of a non-resident's non-compliance with the Canadian tax system on the non-resident rather than the non-resident's Canadian property agent.

In general, Part XIII of the Income Tax Act levies a withholding tax of 25% on rental payments made by Canadians to non-resident owners of Canadian real property. Where the non-resident collects the rent through a Canadian agent (who is typically a building or property manager), the agent is responsible for ensuring that 25% of the gross rental payments are remitted to Revenue Canada. An exception to this general rule exists where a non-resident elects, under section 216 of the Act, to file a Canadian income tax return in respect of the rental income and pay tax on the net property income.

To make the election the non-resident and the non-resident's Canadian agent are required to provide an undertaking to Revenue Canada to file an income tax return for the rental income within six months of the end of the relevant year. Where an election is made, the rule requiring the Canadian agent to remit 25% of the gross rental payments to Revenue Canada does not apply; instead, only 25% of the net amount of rent received by the agent need be remitted. However, if the non-resident fails to either file an income tax return or pay his tax liability within the time required under the election, the Canadian agent becomes liable for the amount that the agent would ordinarily have been required to withhold under Part XIII of the Act (ie., 25% of the gross rental payments) less the amount of tax actually remitted. The non-resident's tax liability is placed on the Canadian agent in an attempt to protect the government from the loss of any tax revenue arising from the non-resident's failure to pay the required tax. This mechanism is necessary because, in practice, it would be very difficult to enforce a tax liability on non-resident property owners.

We are considering alternatives to the current system which may reduce the liability of Canadian agents while at the same time protecting Canada's tax base. To achieve these objectives, we are prepared to consider a system which would require non-resident property owners to post security with Revenue Canada in order to take advantage of the election to file an income tax return and avoid having tax withheld on the gross amount of the rental payments. Where the non-resident fails to pay the required amount of tax within the specified time, the government would be able to look to the security; accordingly, the Canadian agent's exposure to tax could be reduced. In this context, acceptable security could be similar to that which is required under section 116 of the Act.

Finance is not, however, committed to this proposal; it remains our view that the current system works reasonably well from the government's viewpoint, and implementation of the alternative proposal would be considered only if it were thought to provide a better system from the taxpayer's perspective. This alternative has been outlined to a number of real estate organizations and other interested parties from whom we hope to gather comments over the course of the coming months.

I would also note that at our recent meeting you raised the possibility of considering changes to the existing time limits for filing a Part I income tax return under subsection 216(4). We would be pleased to receive written comments on your suggestion for modifying those time limits or on the alternative system outlined above.

Yours sincerely,
Len Farber, Director,
Tax Legislation Division,
Department of Finance

Proposed Amendment — Authorized foreign bank

Notice of Ways and Means Motion (authorized foreign banks), February 11, 1999: (6) That an authorized foreign bank be subject to tax under Part XIV of the Act.

Department of Finance news release, February 11, 1999: Branch Tax

Resident corporations must pay withholding tax on dividends remitted to a non-resident parent. The concept of a dividend is not relevant to a branch office, however, as the non-resident home office is not a separate legal entity from its branches. Part XIV of the Income Tax Act imposes a "branch tax" on the earnings of a non-resident corporation carrying on business in Canada through a branch office, to the extent that the earnings of the non-resident corporation are not retained in Canada to fund the Canadian operations. The branch tax is designed to replicate the tax treatment of dividends. For example, the branch tax is reduced in cases where a treaty provides for a reduced withholding rate on dividends.

It is proposed that the branch tax apply to foreign banks. The application of this tax is intended to ensure that Canadian branches of foreign banks are taxed in the same manner on their surplus as Canadian subsidiaries of foreign banks.

[For other proposals see under 248(1)"authorized foreign bank" — ed.]

(1.1) Excluded gains — For the purposes of subsection (1), paragraph 115(1)(b) shall be read without reference to subparagraphs (i) and (iii) to (xii).

Proposed Amendment — 219(1.1)

(1.1) Excluded gains — For the purpose of subsection (1), the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1) shall be read without reference to paragraphs (a) and (c) to (k) of that definition and as if the only interests or options referred to in paragraph (l) of that definition were those in respect of property described in paragraph (b) of that definition.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 104, will amend subsec. 219(1.1) to read as above, applicable after October 1, 1996.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 219(1) of the Act, a non-resident corporation's taxable income earned in Canada for a taxation year is one of the elements of the corporation's tax base in respect of the "branch tax" imposed under Part XIV of the Act. Subsection 219(1.1) restricts the definition of taxable Canadian property for the purposes of computing a non-resident corporation's branch tax base under subsection 219(1). For those purposes, subsection 219(1.1) directs that the existing definition of taxable Canadian property in paragraph 115(1)(b) of the Act is to be read without reference to subparagraphs 115(1)(b)(i) and (iii) to (xii). As a consequence of the relocation of the definition "taxable Canadian property" to subsection 248(1) of the Act, it is now necessary to amend subsection 219(1.1) to reflect the new definition of taxable Canadian property.

History: Subsec. 219(1.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 219(1), applicable to taxation years that begin after 1995.

(2) Exempt corporations — No tax is payable under this Part for a taxation year by a corporation that was, throughout the year,

(a) a bank;

(b) a corporation whose principal business was

(i) the transportation of persons or goods,

(ii) communications, or

(iii) mining iron ore in Canada; or

(c) a corporation exempt from tax under section 149.

(3) Provisions applicable to Part — Sections 150 to 152, 154, 158, 159 and 161 to 167 and Division J of Part I are applicable to this Part with such modifications as the circumstances require.

Pre-RSC History: Subsec. 219(3) substituted by 1985, c. 45, subsec. 111(1). Subsec. 219(3) formerly read:

(3) Sections 150 to 167, except sections 153, 155, 156, 157 and 160, are applicable mutatis mutandis to this Part.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 219.

(4) Non-resident insurers — No tax is payable under subsection (1) for a taxation year by a non-resident insurer, but where it elects, in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, to deduct, in computing its Canadian investment fund as of the end of the immediately following taxation year, an amount not greater than the amount, if any, by which

(a) the amount, if any, by which the total of

(i) the insurer's surplus funds derived from operations as of the end of the year, and

(i.1) where, in any particular taxation year that began before the end of the year, the insurer transferred to a taxable Canadian corporation with which it did not deal at arm's length any designated insurance property of the insurer for the particular year, and

(B) the property was transferred before November 22, 1985 and subsection 85(1) of that Act applied in respect of the transfer, the amount, if any, by which

(C) the total of the fair market value, at the time of the transfer, of all such property

exceeds

(D) the total of the insurer's proceeds of disposition of all such property, exceeds the total of

(ii) each amount on which the insurer has paid tax under this Part for a previous taxation year,

(iii) the amount, if any, by which the insurer's accumulated 1968 deficit exceeds the amount of the insurer's maximum tax actuarial reserves for its 1968 taxation year for its life insurance policies in Canada,

(iv) the insurer's loss, if any, for each of its 5 consecutive taxation years ending with its 1968 taxation year, from all insurance businesses (other than its life insurance business) carried on by it in Canada (computed without reference to section 30 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, as it read in its application to those years), except to the extent that any such loss was deductible in computing its taxable income for any of its taxation years ending before 1969, and

(v) the total of all amounts in respect of which the insurer has filed an election under subsection (5.2) for a previous taxation year in accordance with that subsection,

exceeds

(b) the amount of the insurer's attributed surplus for the year, the insurer shall, on or before the day on or before which it is required to file a return under Part I for the year, pay a tax for the year equal to 25% of the amount, if any, by which the amount it has so elected to deduct exceeds the amount in respect of which it filed an election under subsection (5.2) for the year in accordance with that subsection.

Proposed Addition — 220(4.5)–(4.71)

(4.5) Security for departure tax — If an individual who is deemed by subsection 128.1(4) to have disposed of a property (other than a right to a benefit under, or an interest in a trust governed by, an employee benefit plan) at any particular time in a taxation year (in this section referred to as the individual's "emigration year") elects, in prescribed manner on or before the individual's balance-due day for the emigration year, that this subsection and subsections (4.51) to (4.54) apply in respect of the emigration year,

(a) the Minister shall, until the individual's balance-due day for a particular taxation year that begins after the particular time, accept adequate security furnished by or on behalf of the individual on or before the individual's balance-due day for the emigration year for the lesser of

(i) the total amount of taxes under Parts I and I.1

(A) that would be payable by the individual for the emigration year if the exclusion or deduction of each amount referred to in paragraph 161(7)(a) were not taken into account, but

(B) that would not have been so payable if each property (other than a right to a benefit under, or an interest in a trust governed by, an employee benefit plan) deemed by subsection 128.1(4) to have been disposed of at the particular time, and that has not been subsequently disposed of before the beginning of the particular year, were not deemed by subsection 128.1(4) to have been disposed of by the individual at the particular time, and

(ii) if the particular year does not immediately follow the emigration year, the amount determined under this paragraph in respect of the individual for the taxation year that immediately precedes the particular year; and

(b) except for the purposes of subsections 161(2), (4) and (4.01),

(i) interest under this Act for any period that ends on the individual's balance-due day for the particular year and throughout which security is accepted by the Minister, and

(ii) any penalty under this Act computed with reference to an individual's tax payable for the year that was, without reference to this paragraph, unpaid shall be computed as if the particular amount for which adequate security has been accepted under this subsection were an amount paid by the individual on account of the particular amount.

Technical Notes: Section 220 of the Act sets out a number of rules relating to the administration and enforcement of the Act.

New subsections 220(4.5) to (4.54) of the Act permit an individual to elect, on giving security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property (other than an employee benefit plan right) in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. If such an election is made, interest does not start to accrue on the amount secured until such time as the amount becomes unsecured, as described below. In addition, relief is provided from a penalty under the Act to the extent that it is computed with reference to the unpaid tax with respect to the amount secured.

New subsection 220(4.5) of the Act allows an individual to elect, in prescribed manner, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. It is intended that this deferral also operate in respect of the corresponding provincial taxes for which the Government of Canada has assessment and collection responsibilities, with the settlement of accounts between the governments taking place as the tax is collected. To understand how the subsection works, several points should be noted.

- The security rule is in a mechanical sense applied annually. That is, the Minister of National Revenue's obligation to accept security applies for one year at a time. This does not mean that the emigrant must file a renewed election each year, but only that the Minister will determine on an annual basis whether, and in what amount, the security may remain in place.
- While the election to provide security must ordinarily be made — and the security itself must be provided — on or before the individual's balance-due day for the year of emigration, special accommodation is provided for those who cease to be resident before these amendments receive Royal Assent. Those individuals have until their filing-due date for the taxation year that includes Royal Assent to make the election and provide the security.
- The provision requires the Minister of National Revenue to accept "adequate security." The adequacy of any particular proposal for security is a matter of fact. It is understood, however, that in respect of tax on a gain from the deemed disposition of shares of a corporation, the Minister will not exclude the possibility of accepting some or all of the shares as security.

Where an individual has elected under subsection 220(4.5) and has provided adequate security, the Minister of National Revenue must, for a particular taxation year that begins after the individual ceases to be a resident of Canada, accept adequate security for the lesser of two amounts. The amounts are, in effect:

(i) the individual's taxes under Parts I and I.1 of the Act for the emigration year, to the extent those taxes are attributable to the deemed disposition under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act of properties that have not been disposed of before the particular year; and

(ii) if the particular year does not immediately follow the emigration year, the amount for which security was accepted for the preceding taxation year.

Where an individual who emigrated from Canada actually disposes, in a given year, of a property that was the subject of a deemed disposition on emigration, the Minister's obligation to accept security for the tax attributable to the deemed disposition of that property lasts only until the individual's balance-due day for the given year. The amount for which the Minister must accept security, in respect of a given departure from Canada, may thus decrease from year to year as the former emigrant disposes of properties. The amount cannot, however, increase.

An amount of tax may also become unsecured if the security furnished by the taxpayer for the tax has ceased to be adequate. For additional information in respect of inadequate security, see the commentary on subsection 220(4.53).

The effects of the acceptance of security by the Minister under subsection 220(4.5) are, first, that the Minister will not take any action to collect the tax so secured, and second, that for the purpose of computing interest and penalties owing by the taxpayer, the amount secured will be treated as an amount paid on account of the tax liability.

New subsection 220(4.5) generally applies to dispositions that occur after October 1, 1996. However, as noted above, elections made and security furnished under this subsection will be considered timely if effected before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the particular day on which these amendments receive Royal Assent.

Related Provisions: 128.3 — Shares acquired on rollover deemed to be same shares for 220(4.5); 128.1(6) — Tax cancelled if emigrant returns to Canada; 152(10) — Posted security deemed not to be tax assessed for purposes of administration of provincial tax; 220(4.51) — Exemption for first $25,000 of security; 220(4.52) — Security effective only for departure tax; 220(4.53) — Where security proves inadequate; 220(4.54) — Extension of time for making election; 220(4.7) — Reduction in security for undue hardship.

(4.51) Deemed security — If an individual (other than a trust) elects under subsection (4.5) that that subsection apply in respect of a taxation year, for the purposes of subsections (4.5) to (4.54) the Minister is deemed to have accepted at any time after the election is made adequate security for a total amount of taxes payable under Parts I and I.1 by the individual for the emigration year equal to the lesser of

(a) the total amount of those taxes that would be payable for the year by an inter vivos trust resident in Canada (other than a trust described in subsection 122(2)) the taxable income for which for the year is $67,000, and

(b) the greatest amount for which the Minister is required to accept security furnished by or on behalf of the individual under subsection (4.5) at that time in respect of the emigration year, and that security is deemed to have been furnished by the individual before the individual's balance-due day for the emigration year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 220(4.5) of the Act permits an individual to elect, on giving adequate security to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. New subsection 220(4.51) treats an individual (other than a trust) as having furnished acceptable security to the Minister for the lesser of two amounts. The first amount is the total amount of taxes under Parts I and I.1 of the Act that would be payable, at the highest tax rate that applies to individuals, on a taxable capital gain of $67,000. (For administrative simplicity, this amount is described in the provision as the amount of those taxes that an inter vivos trust would pay for a year if the trust's taxable income for the year were $67,000.)

The second amount is the greatest amount of tax for which the Minister is required to accept security under subsection 220(4.5) for any particular taxation year of the individual. The deemed security is treated as having been furnished by the individual before the individual's balance-due day for the year in which the individual ceased to be a resident of Canada.

The effect of this provision is to excuse individual emigrants (other than trusts) from the requirement to provide security for an amount at least equal to the taxes payable on their first $100,000 of capital gains ($67,000 of taxable capital gains) resulting from the deemed disposition on emigration.

New subsection 220(4.51) applies after October 1, 1996. To reflect the three-quarters inclusion rate for capital gains that applies before the 2000 federal budget, a transitional rule provides that the amount "$67,000" in new paragraph 220(4.52)(a) shall be read as "$75,000" in respect of emigration years that are before 2001.

(4.52) Limit — Notwithstanding subsections (4.5) and (4.51), the Minister is deemed at any time not to have accepted security under subsection (4.5) in respect of an individual's emigration year for any amount greater than the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total amount of taxes that would be payable by the individual under Parts I and I.1 for the year if the exclusion or deduction of each amount referred to in paragraph 161(7)(a), in respect of which the day determined under paragraph 161(7)(b) is after that time, were not taken into account

(b) the total amount of taxes that would be determined under paragraph (a) if this Act were read without reference to subsection 128.1(4).

Technical Notes: New subsections 220(4.5) and (4.51) of the Act set out rules respecting the posting of security for tax that is owing as a result of a deemed disposition of property under paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. New subsection 220(4.52) of the Act limits the amount of tax that may be so secured to the total tax payable under Parts I and I.1 of the Act in respect of the application of paragraph 128.1(4)(b) in the taxation year that the individual ceased to be a resident of Canada (calculated without reference to any of the deductions or exclusions listed in paragraph 161(7)(a) of the Act).

New subsection 220(4.52) applies after October 1, 1996.

(4.53) Inadequate security — Subject to subsection (4.7), if it is determined at any particular time that security accepted by the Minister under subsection (4.5) is not adequate to secure the particular amount for which it was furnished by or on behalf of an individual,

(a) subject to a subsequent application of this subsection, the security shall be considered after the particular time to secure only the amount for which it is adequate security at the particular time;

(b) the Minister shall notify the individual in writing of the determination and shall accept adequate security, for all or any part of the particular amount, furnished by or on behalf of the individual within 90 days after the day of notification; and

(c) any security accepted in accordance with paragraph (b) is deemed to have been accepted by the Minister under subsection (4.5) on account of the particular amount at the particular time.

Technical Notes: New subsection 220(4.5) of the Act permits an individual to elect, on giving security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. If such an election is made, interest and penalties do not accrue on the particular amount secured until such time as the amount becomes unsecured.

If the Minister determines, at any time, that the security accepted under subsection 220(4.5) is not adequate to secure the particular amount for which it was furnished by the individual, new subsection 220(4.53) of the Act provides that the security secures the part of the particular amount for which it is adequate security at that particular time; the balance of the particular amount is unsecured. The Minister is required to notify the individual in writing if part of the particular amount becomes unsecured in this manner, and the individual has the opportunity to furnish further security to the Minister within 90 days of being so notified. Where additional security is so furnished, the Minister is deemed to have accepted it in accordance with subsection 220(4.5).

New subsection 220(4.53) applies after October 1, 1996.

Related Provisions: 220(4.54)(c) — Extension of 90-day period under (4.53)(b).

(4.54) Extension of time — If in the opinion of the Minister it would be just and equitable to do so, the Minister may at any time extend

(a) the time for making an election under subsection (4.5);

(b) the time for furnishing and accepting security under subsection (4.5); or

(c) the 90-day period for the acceptance of security under paragraph (4.53)(b).

Technical Notes: New subsection 220(4.5) of the Act permits an individual to elect, on giving security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that is owing as a result of the deemed disposition of a particular property in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) of the Act. This election must be made, and the security furnished, on or before the balance-due date for the taxation year that the individual ceased to be a resident of Canada. New subsection 220(4.53) of the Act permits an individual to furnish additional security to the Minister, where the Minister has notified the individual that security previously furnished is no longer adequate. The additional security must be so furnished within 90 days of the Minister's notification.

New subsection 220(4.54) of the Act permits the Minister to extend the time available to an individual to make an election or to furnish security under subsection 220(4.5), or to furnish additional security under subsection 220(4.53), where the Minister considers it just and equitable to do so.

New subsection 220(4.54) applies after October 1, 1996.

(4.6) Security for tax on distributions of taxable Canadian property to non-resident beneficiaries — Where

(a) solely because of the application of subsection 107(5), paragraphs 107(2)(a) to (c) do not apply to a distribution by a trust in a particular taxation year (in this section referred to as the trust's "distribution year") of taxable Canadian property, and

(b) the trust elects, in prescribed manner on or before the trust's balance-due day for the distribution year, that this subsection and subsections (4.61) to (4.63) apply in respect of the distribution year,

the following rules apply:

(c) the Minister shall, until the trust's balance-due day for a subsequent taxation year, accept adequate security furnished by or on behalf of the trust on or before the trust's balance-due day for the distribution year for the lesser of

(i) the total amount of taxes under Parts I and I.1

(A) that would be payable by the trust for the distribution year if the exclusion or deduction of each amount referred to in paragraph 161(7)(a) were not taken into account, but

(B) that would not have been so payable if the rules in subsection 107(2) (other than the election referred to in that subsection) had applied to each distribution by the trust in the distribution year of property (other than property subsequently disposed of before the beginning of the subsequent year) to which paragraph (a) applies, and

(ii) where the subsequent year does not immediately follow the distribution year, the amount determined under this paragraph in respect of the trust for the taxation year that immediately precedes the subsequent year, and

(d) except for the purposes of subsections 161(2), (4) and (4.01),

(i) interest under this Act for any period ending on the trust's balance-due day for the subsequent year and throughout which security is accepted by the Minister, and

(ii) any penalty under this Act computed with reference to the trust's tax payable for the year that was, without reference to this paragraph, unpaid shall be computed as if the particular amount for which adequate security has been accepted under this subsection were an amount paid by the trust on account of the particular amount.

Technical Notes: New subsections 220(4.6) to (4.63) of the Act permit a trust to elect, on the giving of security acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue, to defer payment of an amount of tax that it owes as a result of the distribution of a taxable Canadian property to a non-resident beneficiary. If such an election is made, interest does not start to accrue on the amount secured until such time as the amount becomes unsecured. In addition, relief is provided from a penalty under the Act to the extent that it is computed with reference to the unpaid tax with respect to the amount secured. These subsections are structured in a similar manner to new subsections 220(4.5) to (4.53), and are intended to operate similarly with respect to both federal and provincial taxes.

Subsection 220(4.6) applies where such a distribution is made and, only because of subsection 107(5) of the Act, the rollover under paragraphs 107(2)(a) to (c) of the Act does not apply to the distribution. Provided that the trust makes an election on or before the trust's balance-due day for the distribution year (or at a later time permitted under subsection 220(4.63)) and furnishes security before that balance-due day (or at a later time permitted under subsection 220(4.63)), the Minister is required to accept security in respect of each taxation year after the distribution year of an amount up to the amount specified under paragraph 220(4.6)(c) in respect of that subsequent year. The amount is required to be accepted until the balance-due day for that subsequent year.

The amount specified under paragraph 220(4.6)(c) for a particular taxation year of a trust is equal to the lesser of the following two amounts:

- the portion of the trust's total tax payable under Parts I and I.1 of the Act (determined without reference to loss carrybacks and other amounts specified under paragraph 161(7)(a)) for the distribution year that would not have been payable if each such distribution of taxable Canadian property (other than taxable Canadian property subsequently disposed of before the beginning of the particular year) had not occurred; and
- where the particular year does not immediately follow the distribution year, the amount so specified for the taxation year of the trust that immediately precedes the particular year.

The relief with regard to arrears interest and penalties is provided under new paragraph 220(4.6)(d). This provision provides that interest is generally payable as if the particular amount for which adequate security is accepted at any time under subsection 220(4.6) in a particular period ending on the balance-due day for a taxation year subsequent to the distribution year had actually been paid on account of the trust's taxes under Parts I and I.1 for the distribution year. The particular amount in respect of a period that ends on a trust's balance-due day for a subsequent taxation year cannot exceed the amount specified under paragraph 220(4.6)(c) for the year. In addition, the particular amount is constrained because of the limit under subsection 220(4.61). However, paragraph 220(4.6)(d) does not apply with respect to interest on unpaid tax instalments which is dealt with under new subsection 107(5.1) of the Act.

Subsection 220(4.61) limits the amount for which the Minister is considered to have accepted security under subsection 220(4.6), in order to take into account reductions as of any day, for the purpose of computing arrears interest, in the calculation of taxes under Parts I and I.1 arising from the carryback of losses and similar amounts. The effect of subsection 220(4.61) is to limit the amount of acceptable security as of any day in respect of a trust's tax payable for a distribution year to:

- the total taxes payable by the trust under those Parts for the distribution year, determined without reference to such reductions that occur after that day

MINUS

- the total taxes payable under those Parts, determined without reference to such reductions and as if the rollover rules in subsection 107(2) had applied to distributions in the distribution year not covered by those rules only because of subsection 107(5).

Subsection 220(4.62) provides rules which apply where security furnished by a trust under subsection 220(4.6) ceases to be adequate. These rules are essentially the same as the rules in subsection 220(4.53). As noted above, subsection 220(4.63) allows for the late filing of elections and the late furnishing of security. Subsection 220(4.63) is essentially the same as subsection 220(4.54).

These amendments apply to distributions that occur after October 1, 1996. However, transitional measures treat elections made, and security furnished, up to the taxpayer's filing-due date for the year in which these amendments receive Royal Assent as having been made at such time as to maximize the benefits under subsection 220(4.6).

Related Provisions: 128.3 — Shares acquired on rollover deemed to be same shares for 220(4.6); 152(10) — Posted security deemed not to be tax assessed for purposes of administration of provincial tax; 220(4.61) — Security effective only for tax caused by 107(5); 220(4.62) — Where security proves inadequate; 220(4.63) — Extension of time for making election; 220(4.7) — Reduction in security for undue hardship.

(4.61) Limit — Notwithstanding subsection (4.6), the Minister is deemed at any time not to have accepted security under that subsection in respect of a trust's distribution year for any amount greater than the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total amount of taxes that would be payable by the trust under Parts I and I.1 for the year if the exclusion or deduction of each amount referred to in paragraph 161(7)(a), in respect of which the day determined under paragraph 161(7)(b) is after that time, were not taken into account

(b) the total amount of taxes that would be determined under paragraph (a) if paragraphs 107(2)(a) to (c) had applied to each distribution by the trust in the year of property to which paragraph (1)(a) applies.

Technical Notes: See under 220(4.6).

(4.62) Inadequate security — Subject to subsection (4.7), where it is determined at any particular time that security accepted by the Minister under subsection (4.6) is not adequate to secure the particular amount for which it was furnished by or on behalf of a trust,

(a) subject to a subsequent application of this subsection, the security shall be considered after the particular time to secure only the amount for which it is adequate security at the particular time;

(b) the Minister shall notify the trust in writing of the determination and shall accept adequate security, for all or any part of the particular amount, furnished by or on behalf of the trust within 90 days after the notification; and

(c) any security accepted in accordance with paragraph (b) is deemed to have been accepted by the Minister under subsection (4.6) on account of the particular amount at the particular time.

Technical Notes: See under 220(4.6).

(4.63) Extension of time — Where in the opinion of the Minister it would be just and equitable to do so, the Minister may at any time extend

(a) the time for making an election under subsection (4.6);

(b) the time for furnishing and accepting security under subsection (4.6); or

(c) the 90-day period for the acceptance of the security under paragraph (4.62)(b).

Technical Notes: See under 220(4.6).

(4.7) Undue hardship — If, in respect of any period of time, the Minister determines that an individual who has made an election under either of subsection (4.5) or (4.6)

(a) cannot, without undue hardship, pay or reasonably arrange to have paid on the individual's behalf, an amount of taxes to which security under that subsection would relate, and

(b) cannot, without undue hardship, provide or reasonably arrange to have provided on the individual's behalf, adequate security under that subsection, the Minister may, in respect of the election, accept for the period security different from, or of lesser value than, that which the Minister would otherwise accept under that subsection.

Technical Notes: In some circumstances, an individual who wishes to provide security under new subsection 220(4.5) or (4.6) of the Act may be unable to do so without undue hardship. In such a case, new subsection 220(4.7) of the Act authorizes the Minister of National Revenue to accept security different from, or of lesser value than, that which would otherwise be required. The Minister is under no obligation to exercise this discretion, and can in any event do so only if the individual can without undue hardship neither provide security, pay the tax owing, nor reasonably arrange to have the security provided or the tax paid on the individual's behalf.

Related Provisions: 220(4.71) — Transactions entered into to create hardship to be ignored.

(4.71) Limit — In making a determination under subsection (4.7), the Minister shall ignore any transaction that is a disposition, lease, encumbrance, mortgage, or other voluntary restriction by a person or partnership of the person's or partnership's rights in respect of a property, if the transaction can reasonably be considered to have been entered into for the purpose of influencing the determination.

Technical Notes: New subsection 220(4.71) of the Act provides that in making a determination under subsection 220(4.7), the Minister will ignore any transaction by which a person or partnership limits their rights in respect of a property, if the transaction can reasonably be considered to have been entered into in order to influence the Minister's determination.

These new subsections apply to dispositions and trust distributions that occur after October 1, 1996.

Application: The June 5, 2000 Notice of Ways and Means Motion, s. 105, will add subsecs. 220(4.5) to (4.71), applicable to dispositions and distributions that occur at any time after October 1, 1996 except that,

(a) the reference to "$67,000" in para. 220(4.51)(a) shall be read as a reference to "$75,000" in respect of emigration years that are before 2001; and

(b) if an individual ceased to be resident in Canada, or a distribution by a trust occurred to which para. 220(4.6)(a) applies in respect of the trust, before the particular day on which the amending legislation is assented to,

(i) an election by the individual under subsec. 220(4.5), or by the trust under subsec. 220(4.6), as the case may be in respect of the taxation year that includes that time is deemed to have been made in a timely manner if it is made on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the particular day; and

(ii) security furnished by or on behalf of the individual under subsec. 220(4.5), or by or on behalf of the trust under subsec. 220(4.6), as the case may be is deemed to have been furnished in a timely manner if it is furnished on or before the individual's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the particular day.

Department of Finance news release, September 10, 1999: Taxpayer Migration and Trusts: Technical Backgrounder

Comments received on the December 1998 detailed proposals regarding taxpayer migration and trusts identified two major concerns: the need for flexibility in accepting security for the later payment of any tax arising from the deemed disposition on departure; and possible overlap between Canadian and foreign taxes. This backgrounder describes the government's proposed response to each of these two concerns. These changes, together with modifications to address more technical issues raised in connection with the December 1998 proposals, will be included in the proposals when they are put into bill form with the 1999 budget legislation.

1. Security for later payment

Several submissions raised concerns about the provision of security for later payment of any tax arising from the deemed disposition on departure. While this option is a significant relieving measure — it allows the deferral of tax, with no interest, until the property in question is eventually disposed of — a number of submissions have noted that some emigrating individuals may have serious difficulty providing acceptable security. This is not entirely a new issue: since 1972, an emigrant who owns, for example, foreign real property has had to either pay the tax on any gain on the property or provide acceptable security. But with the extension of the deemed disposition on departure to more types of property — notably shares of unlisted Canadian companies — difficulties of this kind may arise more frequently than they have in the past.

For example, an individual emigrant whose only significant property is shares of an unlisted Canadian company may be prohibited from pledging those shares as security because of prior restrictions under a shareholder agreement. Even if the shares can be pledged, their value may already be taken up by a bank as security for a business loan, thus making them inadequate security for the tax arising at the time of emigration. If the individual has no means of paying the tax, and no other means of providing security, he or she may have to sell the shares, and thus give up ownership of the company in order to pay the tax.

Under the December proposals, the Minister of National Revenue would have considerable discretion in the administration of the security provisions. In response to the concern about cases such as the one described above, it is proposed that the Minister's discretion be even broader.

Specifically, in cases of undue hardship, the Minister of National Revenue would be able to accept a lesser value of security than, or security of a different kind from, that which the Minister would normally consider adequate. In an extreme case, this would give the Minister authority to accept very modest security. The individual's tax debt would remain owing, and would be collected when the individual eventually disposed of the property, but, in cases like the example described above, the individual would not necessarily be forced to sell the shares in order to satisfy a tax debt that arose because of emigration from Canada.

Two further points should be noted about this broader discretion. First, the statutory rule would not only require that the individual emigrant personally be unable, without undue hardship, to pay the tax or to provide fully acceptable security, it would also require that the individual be unable to reasonably arrange to have another person pay the tax or provide security. If, for example, the individual referred to above controls in any manner whatsoever a corporation that has sufficient assets, the corporation should provide security and the individual will not be able to rely on the undue hardship rule.

Second, to prevent abuse of this relief, the rule would direct the Minister to ignore any restriction that any person or partnership puts on its rights in respect of a property, if that was done for the purpose of influencing a determination under the rule.

(5) Administration of oaths — Any officer or servant employed in connection with the administration or enforcement of this Act, if designated by the Minister for the purpose, may, in the course of that employment, administer oaths and take and receive affidavits, declarations and affirmations for the purposes of or incidental to the administration or enforcement of this Act or regulations made thereunder, and every officer or servant so designated has for those purposes all the powers of a commissioner for administering oaths or taking affidavits.

(a) the Minister is not required to pay to the assignee the assigned amount;

(b) the assignment does not create any liability of Her Majesty in right of Canada to the assignee; and

(c) the rights of the assignee are subject to all equitable and statutory rights of set-off in favour of Her Majesty in right of Canada.
